The bride looked charming in her pretty travelling suit. Her pastor tied the nuptial knot. A large number of invited guests sat down to a sumptuous repast. The bride was the recipient of many beautiful presents. After a long and pleasant drive the happy couple arrived in Strathadam, their future residence. All join in wishing them success in life.

HOPEWELL HILL, Nov. 9.— On Sunday last, Nov. 5th, the Lord Bishop of Fredericton solemnly consecrated the presence of a large concourse of people from that and neighboring districts. After the sentence of consecration had been read by the missionary in charge, the Rev. Allan W. Smithers, the Bishop confirmed a number of condidates, and proceeded to the celebration of Holy Communion, assisted by the Rev. Mr. Fullerton, rector of Petitcodiac, and the priest in charge. The bishop preached a most impressive and scholarly sermon, which was listened to with the utmost attention. Eighteen rersons received the Holy Communion. The musical part of the service, under the leadership of Mr. Jonah, was most creditably rendered, and the assistance of the Elgin choir added much to the beauty and completeness of the ser-vice. Miss Laura Horseman presided at the organ. The offering in aid of afternoon, evering song, with sermon, was taken by the rector of Petitodiac, and was well attended. The little church at River View stands as a memorial to the late Canon Medley of Sussex, who, as far back as 1874 visited that section and incepted the work, now being developed by Rev. Mr.Smithers, the present incumbent, whose efforts to build up this portion of the mission have so far met with every encouragement. The new church is very attractive in appearance, and is splendidly situated. The founder of the church is T. W. Church of River View, to whose interest and zeal the successful issue of the venture is so largely attributed.

Some time after midnight en Tues day a crowd of rowdies committed several acts of vandalism on the road leading from the station to the village. At Mrs. Berry's place they tore down the gates, and a section of the picket fence, eight or ten feet in length, was wrenched from its place and thrown into the ditch. At the summit of the rise in front of Judge Wedderburn's place they tore up about a rod of the plark walk, leaving a treacherous trap for any belated wayfarer. Single plants were also torn up here and there farther along. At the new Orange hall they tore away the platform railing on one side, and NORTHESK, Northumberland Co., Ing the place in a very hazardous condition. Attempts were also made to the residence of Mr. and Mrs. George posts of the building. Ca course everybody is talking about it, but the fact that there is now no stipendiary ma-gistrate here, before whom the culprits could be brought and punished, seems to deaden the ardor of those who otherwise would exert themselves to bring the law breakers to justice It is said that the government is delaying the appointment until certain of their friends and supporters agree upon their man. Meanwhile the community is suffering. The case of John Doherty of Sussex charged with violation of the Canada Temperance Act, which was adjourned after hearing one witness a week ago, was again before Justices Henry Piers and James W. Smith today. The inspector wished to withdraw the case, but this was opposed by F. M.

Sproul, who appeared for the accused and after hearing argument on both sides, the magistrate decided to dismiss the case. FREDERICTON, Nov. 9.- There have been no new developments in the University trouble today. A prominent nember of the faculty, in conversation with your correspondent tonight, stated that as far as he could learn none of the faculty had yet tendered their resignations, and it seems to be the prevailing opinion that the dissenting members will consider and deeply before taking that step In the meantime the students continue to leave and affairs are badly mixed at the institution on the hill. Should Prof. Stockley resign it would probably have the effect of causing more students to leave the college Affairs have almost reached a deadlock and further developments are eagerly awaited. FREDERICTON, Nov. 10 .- The announcement of Rev. Father Casey's appointment as ccadjutor to Bishop Sweeny was Leard with mingled pleasure and regret throughout this city. During the reverend gentleman's residence here he has endeared himself to all classes and denominations. It will be hard to find a successor who will fill his place as well.

University matters are not changed to any extent today. The resignations of Professors Stockley, Dixon and Raymond have been handed to Dr. Inch, president of the senate, by Chancellor Harrison, and Dr. Inch has written the professors asking them to allow their resignations to stand over until the end of the present college year, or name the conditions under which they will remain. The students who have left or propose leaving the university all had offices in the student organizations connected with the institution, which they have resigned, action, however, being deferred until after the professors have decided on the course they will pursue. There is a feeling abroad today that there will not be any changes in the faculty this term, and therefore no good reason for any of the students dropping their studies. Parsons Smith and J. C. Miller, the gospel temperance singing evargelists, were here two nights this week. Hiram Killam, who had been recovering from a severe illness, has had a relapse. Dr. S. C. Murray is attending him. Mrs. Rebecca Butterfield of quite seriously ill a few days ago with weakness of the heart. Dr. Chapman was called. M. M. Tingley returned yesterday

PLORENCE NIGHTINGALE DEAD

Her Noble Work in the Crimea and Her Devotion to the Suffering.

Late English newspapers announce the death of Florence Nightingale. Miss Nightingale was, perhaps, the greatest Englishwoman of the eenth century, whilst, at the same time, the history of her long, suffering life is illuminated by the light of something greater than greatness. Her father was a wealthy Hampshire squire, and she was born 79 years ago in Florence—whence her

The child's talents made them-Mr. Nightingale, himself a nan of cultivated mind, spared no expense in her education. She soon mastered classics and modern languages, mathematics, and science, and as she passed the boundary line which separates the girl from the woman, her perscnal beauty, her attainments, and her wealth all combined to promise a brilliant social future. But even in her girlish days, sensitive and thoughtful, she bad looked out upon the sorrowful mystery of life with observant eyes, and she emerged into womanhood with a life purpose of her own clearly developed. That purpose was to devote herself wholly and exclusively to the suffering and the unfortunate.

Leaving her beautiful country home. she passed in succession through a working probation in the great hospitals of London, Dublin, Edinburgh and Paris, closely studying the nursing system at each establishment. In 1851, in quest of further experience, she joined the only Profestant nursing sisterhood then in existencethat at Kenilworth, in Germany. This completed her work of self-preparation and discipline. A year later she took over the management—and also a large share of the expense of an institution for sick governesses in Harley street, working so hard to set the place upon a thorough footing of efficiency that at the end of two years she had to take a prolonged rest. But she had succeeded. The home had become a model, and its finances were or a sound footing.

That was the first proof she had given of an organizing and administrative capacity which the late Dean Stanley described as nothing less HER CALL TO THE CRIMEA.

Miss Nightingale was now upon the verge of the great crisis of her life. From the battlefields of the Crimea came stories of the sufferings of the unnursed British sick and wounded, rendered more appalling by contrast with the splendid work being done in the French camp by the nursing nuns. It was felt that a woman's directing hand was needed. Sidney Herbert, Mountville was taken suddenly and the minister of war, who had heard of Miss Florence Nightingale, concluded that she was the one woman equal to the emergency.

It is among the interesting coincidences of a great crisis that whilst the statesman was thinking these matters quietly over, a slender woman at the Nightingale mansion of Lea Hurst, was also deeply pondering them in her boundless compassion, and the upshot was that one day two letters crossed each other in the post—one from Mr. Herbert requesting Miss Nightingale to undertake the supreme direction of nursing in the military nospitals at the front, the other from Miss Nightingale spontaneously offering herself for the work. Into the history of her work it is not necessary to enter; but of the complicated horrors confronting her and her thirty-eight companions at the beginning of their undertaking few have now any conception.

The sick and the wounded lay mixed together upon mattresses packed as close as possible upon the floor; the place swarmed with vermin, rats gnawed at the mangled limbs of the helpless living, and over everything else arose an overpowering odor from thousands of festering wounds.

Into this pandemonium there was introduced the form of a frail-looking, delicate woman, and presently chaos began to give way to order. The almost superhuman energy of one woman surmounted every obstacle. She spared herself nothing, from the night watch to the operating tables, and for months she was on her feet for 2 hours a day.

Small wonder that the troops looked upon her with a feeling almost akin to worship. As she paced the wards at night, her benignant features illumined by the lamp she carried, the unfortunate men used to kiss the shadow thrown by the light as she moved Other anecdotes there are of her deep hold upon the admiration of the army, but none touch a chord so poetical a

After the war Lord Stratford de Redcliffe, who had perhaps himself acquired as much reputation from it as any been engaged, and at its close invited the name connected with the wa which would survive in future ages

The war over, she returned home, s martyr of charity, to pass the rest o her life a hopeless invalid as the result of her self-imposed labor. But her work has gone on neverthe less. The £50,000 subscribed by the nation's gratitude she gave for a nurses training home at St. Thomas's Hospi tal, which has become the parent and model of all similar institutions in the country. She has kept abreast with all the developments of hospital organization, and from her sick room has conducted a correspondence nothing less than colossal with all parts of the world.

sheaves with her, the harvest of a life full with a fulness of good such as it is given to few to accomplish.

AN EARLY SESSION.

OTTAWA, Nov. 10.—It is settled that parliament will mest either the last week in January or the first week in February. Any lingering idea that the government had of an appeal to the country this winter has been entirely dispelled by the events of the past month. Mr. Tarte has developed into a veritable "old man of the sea," and until the government can do something to lessen the feeling existing in all parts of Canada against the minister of public works there will be no appeal to the country. While the date of the meeting of the houses has. will be no appeal to the country. White the date of the meeting of the houses has not been definitely nor formally fixed, the ministers have talked the matter over and have come to the conclusion that it shall not be later than Thursday, Jan. 25th, of Feb. 1st. In reaching this decision they have been influenced by the representations of prominent supporters all over the country, who have become heartily tired of summer sessions.

HOWELL HAILS FROM FRED-ERICTON.

W. F. Parker, pastor of Temple Baptist church, Yarmouth, N. S., writes to the Daily Times (8th inst.) of that town: "The public are hereby cautions against giving financial aid to a lad about 17 years of age, who gives his name as George Howell and halls from Fredericton, N. B. I have given him money to send him home, and have tried to lead him to a right course of life, but find him practising deception and obtaining money under false pretences from several persons in our town. I am sorry to have to take this course with the boy, and only do it as a last resort by me to stop his wicked

The Times adds: "The youth, giving his name as Geo. Howell, who 'worked' three clergymen in the town, and against whom Rev. Mr. Parker gives warning in these columns today, tried a game on a broker, which he thought was particularly clever. He saluted the gentleman in question in a suave manner and asked for a loan of $25. 'Wha security have you?' asked the broker 'None,' was the answer. The broke sniffed and turned to his books. 'But wish to get my life insured,' he continued, smoothly, 'and you may keep the policy.' 'That is to say,' said the broker, I pay your premium for you, and loan you another $25. Where do fancy I come in in this game? There is the door. Good day.""

"KRUGER, THE GREAT TYRANT" Boers Are Not Fighting for Freedom

> English Were Ready and Anxious for a Peaceful Settlement.

but Against Freedom for Others-

BIDDEFORD, Me., Oct. 26.-At the request of prominent citizens, Col. Frank W. Roberts of Biddeford, récently United States consul at Cape Town, South Africa, tonight delivered a lecture on The South African Problem. He first gave a historical sketch of the discovery and early settlement of the country and traced its history down to the present time. He discoursed on the government of the country, the habits and occupations of the people, described the process of diamond mining, and finally dwelt upon the present war in the Transvaal, and the causes that led up to it. The first trouble between the Boers and the English, he said, occurred in 1827, when England abolished slavery in the country and insisted on the English language being predominant in the courts. Then the Boers moved north, and there encountered a race of natives against whom the Dutch were powerless to cope. At the Boers' request, the English went into that northern country to assist in fighting the natives. The English were the only ones who were able to preserve order, and had it not been for their assistance the Dutch would have been swept from the face of the earth.

When Kruger stepped in and put a stop to the union between the Boers and British forces, the real trouble England simply desired to maintain a suzerainty over this land, so as to protect the whites from the natives. When the gold mines were opened, 16 years ago, the country was invaded by a vast multitude of prospectors and laborers, which the Boers thought would soon depart. Because they found that these men, who have developed the natural resources of the country and filled the depleted treasury of the Boers' government, are there to stay, the Boers wanted to fight. The war is between two classes, one representing the 18th and 19th centur-ies and the other the 16th and 17th centuries. Kruger is so blind he cannot of a great, united South Africa.

In the present crisis, the Boers are stubborn, where, by making the slightest concession, they could have evaded war. The English were ready and anxious for a peaceful settlement, but the Boers really forced the war, and their defeat will be sure and speedy. The Transvaal is not a republic, but stranded at Carmarthen Bay and a tyranny; Kruger is the great boss, broken up. The beach is strewn with the great tyrant. The Boers are not fighting for freedom, but against the freedom of others. They stand aghast at the transformation that has been going on about them, but they cannot prevail against the onward tendency of civilization. Col. Roberts spoke of the natural hatred of the Dutch for the English, and said that no diplomacy or inter-outbreak.

Lazarus Kildooley and Jeremiah O'-Hare are both retired night watchmen, spending the twilight of their lives amid the peaceful surroundings of Conshohocken. Kildooley, to use his own words, is the "wide awakest man in the borough," a statement which O'Hara has strenuously disputed. As a result of this rivalry G'Hara recently challenged Kildooley to a "keeping awake" contest. By the terms of the agreement Dan McGrogan was chosen referee, each contestant was to post $5, and the stakes were to go to the one staying awake the longest.

Accordingly, at 8 o'clock last Wednesday avaning both contestants and the referee repaired to a top room in the latter's house, and after the money had been put up it was decided to play at a friendly game of three handed euchre to pass the time away. The next morning at 7 o'clock Mrs. McGrogan went to see how the match was progressing, and was astonished to find the trio fast asleep, their heads resting on a card-littered table. The referee was awakened without much difficulty, but the two ex-night watchmen were dead to the world, and were even put to bed without arousing from their slumbers. It was well on toward noon before they finally woke up, and now everybody in Con-shohocken is wondering who got the money.

RUSSIA AND JAPAN.

LONDON, Nov. 11 .- The Shanghai ccrespondent of the Times says: There is every indication of an increased friction between Russia and Japan, owing to the latter's activity in Corea and the northeastern provinces of China."
