THE MOTHER HOUSE.

The present St Vincent's Convent on Cliff street is a comparatively modern building. The quarters kindly given up by Bishop Connolly for the use of the sisters in their turn proved too small for the work of the order, which each succeeding year saw advancing. The wooden buildings on Cliff street wherein the sisters lived are still fresh in the memory of some citizens, and many there are at the present day who spent some of the most pleasant hours of their lives receiving instruction within its walls. A new building became imperative, so the present structure was begun, and in 1865 the new onvent was occupied. The needs of the times and the constantly increasing number of children to be cared for have since made extensions necessary. In 1872 a new wing was added. Three years later a chapel in connection with the convent was built and dedicated in 1876 by the late Bishop Mother Augustine, who continued in His Lordship referred to the founding office up till the time of her death in of the order in St. John some twentyin His Lordship referred to the founding 1897.
