HEAVY SNOW STORM

its to the railway line of large herds of moose.

A very heavy fall of snow between McBride and Prince George, British Columbia, on the main line of the Grand Trunk Pacific, made it very difficult for moose and caribou to find feed. With the surrounding country covered with a mantle of snow ten feet deep, the animals came down to the railway track, and the operating man had considerable difficulty in getting them off the right-of-way.

"When passing over the line with the snow plow," writes Supt. Kirkpatrick." To personally counted over fifty moose in different places on the track, and we had to delay trains to avoid killing them. We did kill six or seven moose, but this was unavoidable as the animals ran some distance shead of the trains then turned and charged the engine. There were some very humorous as well as painful incidents. Two buck moose ran ahead of our snow plow for about two miles, finally turned and charged the plow at full speed. The moose were not killed, however, as the snow from the play ploked them up and threw them about fifty feet from the track. We watched them make their way down through the snow to the river, apparently unfainted."

that the company will lose nothing by the transfer of part of its fleet to be government.

On the other hand it is thought that freight traffic will be very heavy and the officials are said to be somewhat uncertain regarding the size of business. It is not known whether the Calvin Austin, Governor Cobb, Governor Disnies or North Star, vessels which come to St. John, will be used by the American authorities, but it is learned that the steamer Belfast has already been taken over by the government.
