OTTAWA April 3.

THE BUDGET SPEECH, which Finance Ministers view with fear and trembling, and in which Opposition men hope to find food for argument against the powers that be, has been delivered, affording immense satisfaction to the deliverer thereof, his friends, and the Government; and causing corresponding depression to the gentlemen of the "Left."
In his own Province, no one doubted Mr. Tilley's ability to hold a prominent position in the world of figures. But financing for a little Province is quite a different thing from performing the same task for a Dominion whose ambitious borders are bounded by two oceans; and Mr. Tilley might well grasp with a tremulous hand the portfolio of the second minister of the Cabinet, particularly when he had to follow in the contesters of Six Fronts. Tilley might well grasp with a tremulous hand the portfolio of the second minister of the Cabinet, particularly when he had to follow in the footsteps of Sir Francis Hineks, the veteran financier of 30 years standing. In view of these facts it is most gratifying to have to record that upon the testimony of both parties in the House, and all parties out of it, Mr. Tilley's first trying duty as the Finance Minister of Canada, has been satisfactorily and successfully discharged, and that when he resumed his seat, after his first budget speech, on Tuesday, he occupied a higher place in the estimation of Parliament than ever before. Before rising to speak, one could easily see that Mr. Tilley felt the importance and responsibility of the hour, and during the earlier part of his speech, the suppressed tremor in his voice showed that even his steady nerves were receiving a trying test.

Now the vote is a tie. Then the Government majority is 20; now it is 25, 28, and a cheer rings out, suppressed by the Speaker. Up it goes, and then the totals are given, yeas 76, nays 107, and such cheering has never before been heard in the Canadian House of Commons. It is repeated again and again. Fortin has pounded his desk till the lid has cracked. The Speaker rises to declare the motion lost and the cheering is resumed, louder and larger than ever. Huntington has disappeared, while, in his old position, with closed eyes, apparently careless of what is going on, sits the master of the situation, the victor of the hour.

The result has created intense feeling and my opinion is that Sir John, having the fellest investigation into the charges intitative in giving an opportunity for the fellest investigation into the charges. of figures, like one who had been there before, and knew every step of the way; and in one hour-and-a-half, he had given a lucid, impressive resume of the financial history of the country during five eventful years, besides stating explicitly our present condition, and future prospects. The latter part of the speech was delivered with the greatest fluency and vigor. Only

Dear Sirs, yours most truly (Signed) Oscar Captain's report of the loss of the British bark Morocco, of St. John, N. B., by fire at sea, on the 12th of March,

Sailed from Mobile on 24th Feb., boun for Liverpool, with a cargo of eighteen hundred and seventy-eight bales of cotwe took a very heavy gale of what from W. S. W., accompanied with rain, thunder and sharp lightning, lasting untill 4 a. m. of 12th. At about 6.30 a. m., the Steward came to my room and called me, and said he thought he smelt a smoke in the cabin. I got up at once and went to the pilot house and could just perceive there was smoke in the pilot house. I turned to the mate's room and asked him if he had been burning a light as I could see smoke. He said he had not. I said the ship must have been struck with the ship must have been struck with lightning with the tremendous crash we had. About 4 o'clock told the mate to and see if we could discover the Broke out two bales under the poop turning down water, same time sent mate to clear away after hatch on main deck,
