C. M. B. A.

A PLEA FOR UNITY.

With very great pleasure we lay before our readers this week the following letter from the Grand Spiritual Adviser. It breathes—as indeed do all the utterances of that distinguished prelate—a truly Catholic spirit. It is a plea for unity. It will be remembered that at the meeting of the Grand Council convention in Hamilton an almost unanimous vote was passed in favor of asking from the Supreme Council a separate beneficiary jurisdiction in Canada; and at the meeting of the Supreme Council in Montreal the request was granted, only three members voting against it. Considering the radical change this departure has made in C. M. B. A. circles in the Dominion, it is surprising to note with what general approval it has been received. There has been, it is true, a movement organized in the province of Quebec looking toward the establishment there of a Grand Council, which would, if so formed, leave the Canadian branch, and become affiliated with the Supreme body. The great majority of the association in that province, however, are in favor of retaining Canadian unity and there is no longer any doubt that the association in Canada will remain undivided. Nothing has been done by the Grand Council to influence the members one way or the other, apart from an honest appeal in behalf of Catholic unity.

It is pleasant to note that the deputies in the different provinces are working energetically; several new branches have been organized, and a large number are being worked up. We cannot too strongly impress upon the minds of our members, if the association in Canada is to increase and prosper, the paramount importance of cultivating to the utmost a spirit of brotherly affection, of unity and a keen interest in the spread of the association. It is all-important that at branch meetings every discussion should be carried on harmoniously. No matter how radically members may differ one from the other the bitter word should never be spoken; the unkind thought should never be entertained; this is contrary to the spirit of the association, and tends to shatter the very foundation upon which it is built. We do not mean to say that the C. M. B. A. is less harmonious than others of its kind; but what we would like to impress upon our brother members is the fact that each one should in his own way work to the end that the C. M. B. A. should become a model for all others. One very important consideration should be borne in mind by all, viz., that the will of the majority must always be obeyed. We do not mean to say that minorities are always right, and minorities always wrong, but common sense will bring home to the mind of each one of us the self-evident fact that, whether it be in municipal, provincial or Dominion legislative bodies, unless the will of the majority becomes law, and that law be obeyed by all, a state of social chaos will be the outcome.

We therefore earnestly trust that all our Canadian members will henceforth take to heart the lesson conveyed in the letter of the Archbishop of Toronto. If they do we have not the slightest doubt but that the association will rapidly spread and become stronger and stronger year after year, giving every token of permanence, and dispensing blessings without number in thousands of Catholic homes in the Dominion.

St. John's Grove, Toronto, Nov. 22, 1892.

To the Members of the C. M. B. A. of Canada:

MY DEAR BROTHERS—I have heard, with deep regret, of some dissatisfaction prevailing among certain members of our association regarding the agreement made between the Supreme Council of the C. M. B. A. and the Grand Council of Canada.

That agreement was made in the interests of the Canadian members of our association and with the full approval of the overwhelming majority of them. I consider it, on the whole, satisfactory and calculated to secure the best interests of our association.

I have perfect faith in the future of our Canadian Association, if you but remain united and work together in harmony and good will.

As your Grand Spiritual Adviser I most heartily deplore disunion and dissension. These destructive agencies can wreck and ruin the noblest cause, and must, if persisted in, ruin and destroy our noble association.

For the sake of the great interests involved; for the sake of the numerous families and future widows and orphans whose welfare and happiness are at stake; for the honor and self-respect of the members themselves, and the vast influence they can wield, as a numerous, powerful and far-extended association; for the good of the Catholic body, I implore you to banish disunion and discord from amongst you; and I ask you to close up your ranks, and to work heartily together in concord, harmony and good will for the maintenance, the progress and prosperity of the most useful and noblest mutual benevolent association ever established in Canada.

I am fraternally yours, JOHN WALSH, Archbishop of Toronto.

Resolutions of Condolence.

At the last regular meeting of Branch 51, Barrie, the following resolutions were passed: Moved by Bro. A. W. Wardley, seconded by Bro. John Rogers: Whereas it has pleased Almighty God in His infinite wisdom to remove from this world of trial, by the key hand of death, Michael Quinn, Esq., J. P., father of our esteemed and respected President, Daniel Quinn, be it Resolved, that we, the members of Branch 51, deeply sympathize with our respected Brother and family in the loss of a loving and devoted father and of a gentleman respected for his strict adherence to his Church and all matters appertaining to the welfare of the community. We pray that the all-wise and watchful Providence will strengthen them with Christian fortitude to bear their irreparable loss. Be it further Resolved, that a copy of these resolutions be sent to worthy President; also to the CATHOLIC RECORD for publication, and spread on our minute book.

THE IRISH OUTLOOK.

Dublin, Nov. 12.

I have more confidence in the future than on my first arrival here. There is a rent in the dark clouds that were looming over the land. The best and shrewdest men in Ireland begin to see that internal strife means ruin, and they are bold enough to say so. The irreconcilables on both sides would push the war to the bitter end. The name of Parnell is one to conjure with among those nurtured in undying mistrust of England, and the title of Independent captures the support of numbers. In other words, the Parnellites are a strong, compact, earnest and patriotic minority. There are fools and knaves enough among them, but that does not lessen their solidarity and strength. To be sure, the fools and knaves do not want a compromise or peace, but neither do the masses of the Parnellites. For long I had been led to believe that John Redmond was an arch-enemy to reconciliation or compromise; that he, least of all men, wanted an end to this disastrous strife. Such a policy on the part of a cool, capable man could not possibly be excused or palliated, and I have over and over again laid at Mr. Redmond's door the greater share of the blame for this unhappy quarrel. Several, for whose honesty of purpose I have the most sincere respect, assure me that I do John Redmond an injustice; that Redmond is at heart the most moderate man among the Parnellites, and that no one would more gladly welcome a truce than he. They admit that he is aristocratic in his instincts, and that in this fight he has been frequently playing to the gallery, but they claim that he would willingly get down and out-to-morrow, were he convinced that Ireland's good demanded his retirement. This alone augurs well.

John O'Connor, Tim Harrington, J. J. O'Kelly, and J. J. Clancy are unquestionably anxious for peace. No sane man doubts either their patriotism or honesty of purpose. They were all splendid factors in the great national movement that the genius of Parnell brought so close to triumph. Only stupidity and bigotry could attribute their action in the great crisis to aught but generous motives. And to-day their services are absolutely lost to Ireland. And yet among the majority are they who would drive those men forward out of public life. Among the same majority are men who attribute base and unworthy motives to these men, and it is this blind and senseless feeling that is the most powerful factor of all in the perpetuation of this most miserable conflict.

There never was a fight of this kind but there were faults—most serious faults—on both sides. It is not my province to palliate or excuse either side, nor to point out to either the disastrous consequences of its course. I want the Pilot readers to judge that for themselves. There is the glaring fact of a bitter internal fight in Ireland, when all lovers of the old land ought to be standing together hand in hand, ready to wrench from the common foe the greatest boon for Ireland. This is the stubborn fact that appals and disheartens. If persevered in, it will wreck Home Rule, as sure as the rising of to-morrow's sun. It will hurl Ireland back into the slough of despondency and despair, and will entail untold sorrow on millions of the Irish race yet unborn. Another such chance as Ireland has to-day will not occur in this century, nor perhaps in the next. It would need another Parnell and another Gladstone to make such an opportunity as is Ireland's now. And where, in all the centuries, will two such men live again? Such men, as Junot said of the great Napoleon, are only cast on the earth with centuries between. If the opportunity that they created be lost, this generation of Irishmen will never see Home Rule. Let none of your readers judge me ill because I speak of Parnell as I do. If the whole pitiable story that wracked his life and sent him to an untimely grave were told, it would excite not indignation but tears for the frailty of a great man. Great he was, and he will grow greater through all the centuries, and that very greatness ought to make more pitiable the terrible sorrows, or, if you will, the terrible blunders in which his life went out. Can you root out of the heart of Irish people—the generous Irish people—love and veneration for this great figure? You might as well attempt to stay an Alpine avalanche. They do not condone the great blotch that sullied so illustrious a name, but it fills them with anger when the evil deeds of his private life are heralded to the world and the colossal services he has rendered to Ireland are forgotten. If a correct estimate of the situation in Ireland be formed, this feeling must always be reckoned. If necessary, the Irish race beyond the four seas of Ireland ought to build a bridge of gold to reunite the sections. The principles of both sections are the same, the ends they aim at are the same; there are generous and patriotic men on both sides, and on both sides, too, are a host of men who are longing for, and striving to promote an understanding. Above all, outside the active politicians is an ever-increasing body of men who resent the continuation of this war as an insult to the intelligence of the Irish people. The party of peace and reconciliation keeps daily growing, it is finding new recruits in the Parliamentary ranks and also in the ranks of the Bishops and priests. It is the increase of this sentiment that gives me more confidence in the future. Moreover, I have the very best authority for the statement that the measure of Home Rule framed by Mr. Gladstone will be far in advance of the bill brought forward in 1886. That will be a powerful factor in putting an end to strife. For both sides will gladly welcome such a bill, and struggle vigorously and unitedly to pass it into law.

BISHOP McDONELL AT SOUTH FINCH.

Special to the CATHOLIC RECORD. His Lordship the Bishop of Alexandria on Sunday, the 20th ult., blessed St. Bernard's church, South Finch. The members of the parish took occasion to present him with the very flattering address which we print below: To His Lordship the Right Rev. Alexander Macdonell, D. D., Bishop of Alexandria, Ont.

MAY IT PLEASE YOUR LORDSHIP—This, the occasion of your first official visit to this portion of your diocese, affords us the opportunity of tendering to you our heartfelt sentiments of respect, love and obedience. You have come here to bless his new church, which, with many sacrifices, we who shall worship in it have erected to the honor and glory of God; and in the presence of the most distinguished and reverend clergy of this diocese, we have seen a manifestation of the dignity and authority with which you are invested as chief pastor of the diocese. We are glad to which we have the honor and happiness to belong.

It afforded us the greatest pleasure and satisfaction when two years ago we learned that His Holiness Leo XIII. had formed the diocese of Alexandria, and chosen you to its eminent dignity of first Bishop of the new diocese. Your presence in Alexandria was sustained by losing the spiritual government and ministrations of the learned, distinguished and energetic Bishop of Alexandria, to which we felt that he under whom you for so many years faithfully served as a priest recognized in you a successor on whom we could bestow our affectionate regards. We were glad to see you in our midst, and to see you in our hearts. Yes, my Lord, it is with all the generosity that the Catholic faith commands, we receive you as our spiritual father, and we promise you to be ever faithful to those duties which you owe to His Church—in the person of Him whom the Divine Spirit has chosen to be our guide and teacher in the saving doctrine which Christ gave to man to lead him to eternal life.

A CALGARY SENSATION.

THE MOST WONDERFUL CASE EVER RECORDED IN THE NORTH-WEST—MISS LELA CULLEN IS RESCUED FROM WHAT WOULD HAVE BEEN HER DEATH-BED.

Winnipeg Tribune. Calgary, N. W. T., Oct. 20, 1892.—For some time past the residents of this town have been deeply interested in the case of Miss Lela Cullen, a young lady, who had been taken to the mountains of the Rockies, and who had been found by her friends in a very weak state. Her recovery was very much talked of, and the various occasions in the Tribune the particulars of her recovery, your correspondent determined to investigate the case of Miss Cullen, and the result of his investigation is given below.

When your correspondent visited the residence of Mrs. Cullen, the mother of the young lady, he was courteously received, and in reply to his enquiries as to whether she would be willing to give the facts of her daughter's wonderful recovery, for publication for the benefit of other sufferers, Mrs. Cullen readily assented. "My daughter's first illness," said Mrs. Cullen, "was in June 1891, when she was taken with the measles. At that time she was seventeen years of age, tall, fine looking, and exceedingly healthy, weighing about 140 pounds. All the family took the measles, and all got over them without trouble, except Lela. Her case from the first baffled all the ordinary remedies used for that disease, and as the measles did not come out, a physician was called in. He administered remedies, but with no better result, and her case seemed to baffie the physician's skill. After a few weeks my daughter began to improve somewhat, but did not regain her former strength, and six weeks after she was first taken ill, her face neck and limbs broke out in blotches. The doctor was again called in, and said it was the measles getting out of her system, and that she would soon be right again. The doctor's statement was not verified, however, for not only did my daughter not improve, but she gradually grew worse. Soon after she began to swell first the feet, then the limbs, breast and face became puffed up. Another doctor was called in, and he pronounced her truly moribund, and he recommended that she be put to rest. The doctor attended her all winter, and although he seemed to do all in his power for her, she gradually grew weaker and weaker. She did not eat, and her appetite, and as she gradually grew weaker she lost her courage, felt that hope was gone, and she begged to be put to rest. The doctor's medicine having done her no good, was discontinued, and instead he gave her preparations of beef, iron and wine, hypophosphites, eggs, cream, etc. In fact, quantities of the kind, but she would not be forced upon her to keep her alive and I gave up all hope of her recovery, and in my misery waited for her death. She was now so weak that she could not walk across the floor, and in order to rest her we would lift her into a chair, where she would sit for a short while when we would again place her in bed. She was slowly but surely dying before our eyes, and nothing we could do for her was of avail. She was still puffed up, and nothing the doctors could do could reduce the swelling. Her limbs would no longer support her and she could only sit up a very short time each day. In this condition she lingered on until August, 1891, when five months after she was first taken ill, and while we were sorrowfully awaiting what seemed the inevitable end, a ray of hope came from the use of Dr. Williams' Pink Pills for Pale People, and while I feared that I had heard of this wonderful medicine too late, I hoped almost against hope and sent to the headquarters of the company, at Brockville, Ont., for a supply. At this time Lela was puffed up, and her weight had been reduced to 90 pounds, and her lips were blue. You will thus see how little hope there was at that time. When she began to use Dr. Williams' Pink Pills. After she had taken the first box, although there was no visible improvement, she thought they were worth a trial, and she took a second box. At the end of the second box I could notice the improvement, and Lela was very hopeful, and felt life was returning to her again. After she had been on the pills for a month, she was able to get up, and by October she was so well that she could superintend her own household affairs, and continued taking the pills and rapidly recovered all her old time health, strength and spirits. I cannot tell you," continued Mrs. Cullen, "how happy and contented I was with the wonderful medicine that saved my daughter's life. You may be sure that both me and mine will always warmly recommend it, as we have every reason to do so."

WHAT A PROMINENT DRUGGIST SAYS. Your correspondent then called upon Mr. J. T. Templeton, the proprietor of the drug store on Stephen street. In reply to an enquiry as to what he could tell me about Dr. Williams' Pink Pills, Mr. Templeton replied: "I can tell you that I have used Dr. Williams' Pink Pills for Pale People, and I would tell you how many boxes I have used, and how many have been benefited by them. I have used Dr. Williams' Pink Pills for Pale People, and I would tell you how many boxes I have used, and how many have been benefited by them. OBITUARY.

It is with profound regret that we have to chronicle the death of Elizabeth Ann Bower, daughter of Mr. J. C. Bower of Ottawa—in religion, Sister Mary of Jesus—who departed this life on Monday morning, the feast of the Presentation of the Blessed Virgin. The deceased Sister was fortified with all the rites of the Church, which she received with perfect recollection and the most holy dispositions. Her death was a great loss to the community, and she was a most devoted and diligent worker in the cause of the poor and the afflicted.
