Sir E. Grey's Proposal for Solving the Ulster Problem.

Sir Edward Grey, dealing with the Ulster problem, in a speech at Bewick on Monday, made the following observations:—
We want to get the Irish question out of the way. It does not make a settlement by consent easier to be confronted with the language we have heard on behalf of Ulster in the last few weeks.
They are appealing to us on the other side to realize how much better a settlement would be by consent than a settlement which is carried by force. We do not want to disregard that appeal.
But if the minority in Ireland are to use threats of civil war, what is to be expected of the majority in Ire-

Kuntz's OLD GERMAN LAGER
HURRY up with a bottle of Kuntz's Old German, said the man from New York. "It's worth a trip to Canada to get a drink of this corking brew. There's nothing like the 'Old German' flavor in the United States, you know. Perhaps because the 'Old German' process of brewing is so very costly. Anyway, you Canadians ought to feel proud of Kuntz's for brewing such a superb beverage. And I guess you are from the number I see drinking Kuntz's Old German."

The Cash Intrigue

By George Randolph Chester
(Copyright, 1909, by the Bobbs-Merrill Co.)

It was already passing her. The bank was very steep at this point. Next the top she slipped, and she was compelled to throw her arm hastily about her. She let her shoulders rest flippily back in his embrace and allowed him to drag her dead weight up over the litter rise, and Kelvin almost cursed himself aloud, for again he had found that contact more than pleasurable. "After all"—Phillip brought himself back to the future with a jerk. "No entanglements with women." That had been the one warning motto he had set for himself, and he must observe it if he would accomplish his boundless ambitions.
Mrs. Rensselaer, puffing from the exertion of being dragged up the bank by Herbert, turned to that young man with severity. "Herbert," she admonished him, "really I think you are neglecting your opportunities most shamefully. It is within your reach to make the name of Rensselaer precisely what it used to be."
"With Miss Breed's money," commented Herbert with ill-concealed disdain. "If I loved her or if she herself were capable of love it would be different."
"You are perfectly absurd, Herbert," she insisted. "Lillian is the richest girl in the world. After she's married her little eccentricities, impossible in a girl, will only enhance her charm. Let me be perfectly frank with you. This girl, while she thinks she has her mind set upon Phillip Kelvin, really wants a husband. I scarcely dare whisper her into society unaccompanied—she would disgrace us all. But a strong man, such as you, could marry her, master her and make her content, and she would be most preposterous."
"I want to work, to carve out my own fortune as Kelvin has done. I am not so clever as he. I could not make a million in five years, as he did, but I could try, which, if you only knew, is a great satisfaction. Instead of that you make me stop work. You give up practically your whole income to keep me an idler at a few dog clubs in New York. I don't see how you can consistently object. You are yourself accepting a salary."
"Herbert," she exclaimed. "I am a guest here, and I may I repeat by Mr. Breed is the income from investments which he has made for me."
"He laughed. "Ten thousand dollars," said he. "and on that Breed pays you dividends of ten thousand a year. It's money, nothing else."
"How erude you are!" she protested. "How do you know that Mr. Breed does not make 100 per cent on the money I gave him? How do I know? I tell you, you are ungrateful."
As they entered the house Elsie White, who had been gathering flowers for Lillian's room, went up on the porch, where Rollins met her and stopped to chat with her for a moment.
"If you must know," Rensselaer said, "there is an illustration of why the thought of Lillian is so distasteful to me. That's the kind of girl I want to marry."
"Lillian's maid," his aunt exclaimed. "Herbert, you are really past belief."
"You needn't worry about her. I don't want the particular one, and if I did I couldn't have her. Her eyes see no one but Phillip."
"Do you mean to say that if you went to this girl of no class whatever and offered her the Rensselaer name she would refuse you?"
"She certainly would," replied Herbert promptly. "To her position means but very little, love means much, and she is beautiful enough to command love."
"She handsome," reluctantly admitted his aunt, "but rather vulgarly healthy, don't you think?"
"God is vulgar in a good many things he does," replied Herbert wearily, "suits and flowers, for instance. Dreadful loud colors he uses sometimes!"

transportation. I have put them in direct competition with our own plants, and they are undebating me. I intend to let them have some large contracts at a price we cannot touch. Now I begin to have dreams."
"I don't see any difficulty in that," laughed Kelvin. "A man doesn't dream many dreams in the face of failure. It's success that brings dreams. I have dreams of my own. I have done a little thinking about those dreams of late."
"I know you have," interposed Rollins. "Somebody has been doing a great deal of thinking around here. At first I thought it was Mr. Breed, but now I know that he hires his thinking."
Breed himself was the first to acknowledge by a chuckle the truth of this remark.
"I used to have to do it myself when I was poor," he admitted, "but that is not the way to success. You can't get rich that way any more than you can by performing all your own manual labor. My success is built on an unusual ability to discover men who can think for me. But you two go ahead and exchange your dreams; I am interested."
"I have no objection to telling mine," said Kelvin. "I want to do a little trust busting."
"I've tried it, and that's why I'm here," laughed Rollins. "Trust busting, with its absolute control of every mile of railroad in the United States, is the easiest thing in the world. Raymer, Speed, Melton Sears & Co. and all the others have been making life a burden to me. Strangely enough they don't want to be drawn and quartered."
"I hate them, every one," suddenly snapped Breed. "A dozen times they tried to gobble me up in the early days. I have their photographs, too, waiting to be checked off."
"We'll let you check them off by and by, but for the present they are crippling me, but it was a task. Even with all my experience I didn't appreciate the full extent of the private car graft. It was a colossal trick, serving merely as a disguise for excessive and absurd rebates."
"You stopped it," admitted Rollins, with a sigh, "and the next thing that happened I had all the big packers on my neck."
"The only way to forget the attacks of the packers," suggested Kelvin, "is to attack the other monopolies. Hamstring them the first stroke."

MAGISTRATE LICKS INSURANCE STAMPS

Says Objection to Do So is Very Absurd—Question of Principle.

A lady who objects on principle to affixing stamps to insurance cards had an amusing argument on Thursday with Mr. Fordham, the West London Magistrate. She is Miss Clare Hoskin, of Warwick road, Kensington, and she surrendered to her bail to answer the charge, remanded from the previous day, of failing to pay a servant's contribution under the insurance act.

The case had been adjourned to allow her to stamp the servant's card and pay 10s. 6d. costs. She had been brought to the court on a warrant, because she refused to answer a summons.
Miss Hoskin now said she had had stamps affixed for all the weeks the servant was in her employment, except a period of four weeks, during which the maid worked for her for nothing.
Mr. Fordham observed that as far as he understood the Act stamps must be affixed for every week in which a servant was actually employed, whether wages were paid or not. He added: "If you have any objection to putting the stamps on let me do it for you. I have no objection. I shall be happy to act as your agent."
Miss Hoskin accepted the offer, and handed the stamps and the card to the magistrate, who, amid much laughter, proceeded with mock solemnity to lick the stamps and affix them on the card.
"I am not a servant of the Government, and I don't see why I should collect their tax for them," objected Miss Hoskin. "It is a question of principle."
"Well," said Mr. Fordham, "there you have found a magistrate to do the work for you. Now there is only the matter of costs, 10s. 6d., and when that is paid I shall mark the case 'Withdrawn.'"
Miss Hoskin handed over the money, and Mr. Fordham then remarked, "Now I'll bid Miss Hoskin 'good-day.'"
