FREIGHT TARIFFS.

The question of freight rates for the coming season should be given careful consideration not only by the transportation people who make the tariffs, but also by the local merchants and claim owners on the creeks, who ultimately must settle the entire bill. We must have lower freight charges or the development of the country is absolutely certain to be hindered, and its growth retarded to an extent entirely unneces-

Every item of expense involved either in the operation of a claim or in the will not object to receiving the gift .prosecution of a business enterprise in Seattle P.-I. Dawson, or in connection with ordinary household affairs, is determined to a large extent by the cost of shipping a pound of freight from the coast cities of a large portion of the community is entirely too high.

High freight tariffs mean high priced oblige yours faithfully, commodities, high cost of living and high cost or labor-the whole thing resulting in confining the scope of mining operations to a limited area of rich ground which will show a profit after paying the enormous expenses involved. It must not be overlooked, however, that such rich ground will not last forever. In fact we are confronted now with the statement that much of it is already worked out.

In view of this condition it becomes at once apparent that the future prosperity of the country rests largely upon stretches of low grade ground along our creeks and rivers, upon a basis which will admit of its development at a profit to the operator, This can be accomplished in no way other than through a material reduction from the prevailing freight tariffs.

We are quite agreed to the idea that the Yukon territory has reached is largely due to the splendid transportation facilities which have been furnished in the past three years. But we are further impressed with the fact that the country must support a large productive population or the heavy investments which the transportaion companies have made in equipping themsleves for business will not prove permanently profitable.

There is no questioning the fact that we have resources of sufficient extent and value to maintain a much larger population than we have at the present time. It rests largely with the trans portation concerns to determine whether the territory is to expand and grow or whether it is to remain at a standstill, or possibly begin a retrograde movement. There is no reasonable excuse to be advanced why either of the last two conditions should prevail. Everything is favorable for a long term of prosperity for the Yukon if the question of freight tariffs is adjusted in a fair and equitable manner. If the Huntington theory of charging all the traffic will bear and possibly more-is pursued, the country is absolutely certain to go behind. If, on the other hand, the transportation people make up their minds to be satisfied with rea- trade.

Here is a good thought, James iii. 2. Can we do it? See Job viii. 20. The trouble with people is this, Jer. xvii. 9. See what is said in I Sam. xvi. 7. If it were not for this, we would all be lost. > "It is very disgustin' ter me," said the sourest dough in the Yukon yesterday, ther hear fellers, talk erbout weather what ain't had no more nor 20 years 'sperience in the country. They don't know nothin' erbout cold weather, an' let me tell you right here that so long as ther temperature can be kept track of by these things called theolifers, 'taint very dam cold. Now I remember well ther fourth winter I was in ther country. It was ther winter of '67. Reason I remember it so well World. is that me and an Limping Grouse was married that winter. She limped when she walked, havin' had her foot smashed when a child by havin' it ketched between daylight an' dark. Wall, that winter it fruz pure alcohol till it bruk like glass, an' ther strangest thing erbout it was 'at ther colder it got ther harder it snowed, an' ther snow was as blue as ary bit o' sky you ever seed. An' I say 'at these here fellers what ain't seed blue snow ain't got no business talkin' erbout cold weather. Talk erbout ice worms er foot long! It makes me ache. We had 'em that winter as long as rake handles. They just et up all ther ice in ther river there wern't none left ter go out in ther spring.

"Ther nex cold weather wer in ther winter o' '73, it being a dead ringer ter '67. Considerable blue snow tell in '73 but ther ice worms wer sort o' puny, not bein' over four foot long an' not hevin' ther flavor they'd orter had.

"Since 'at time ther ain't bin no winter weather ter speak on. One thing I think keeps ther temperature up is these yer fellers wot ain't bin here mor'n 20 year is always erspoutin' bout wot they seed arter we'd stopped havin' cold weather in ther country. If they'd quit usin' s'much wind ertalkin' it might hev erchance ter git cold once more.'

When David the Psalmist said: "The earth is the Lord's and the fullness thereof," he doubtless realized that all through the long line of humanity to come cheap jays would bob up here and there and endeavor to elbow the Lord to one side. This has always been attempted, but has never succeeded for any great length of time. Roman dictators have been dethroned; men who imagined they stood next to the Chinese throne have been hot-potted; ward-heelers to whom "every bloke on de Bowery done obeysance" have been "Black Mariahed" 30 days for offering bribes. All of which goes to confirm the statement of David that "The earth is the Lord's and the fullness thereof." David could very truthfully have gone further and said "Man is small potatoes, few in a hill. and the hills a long distance apart." For no matter how much a man may be vaunted with a sense of his own importance, he may be turned down as easily as rolling off a log. Kings may be dethroned and presidents of everything from a republic down to a free library may be turned down. Verily, the earth is the Lord's and the fullness thereof.

The Harz Peasantry.

The Harz peasants are an honest, thrifty lot, very independent and proud, but also full of religious feeling, and a book might be written on their beliefs and customs. At funerals, births and marrriages every act is inrested with meaning, and a legend or proverb is quickly brought forward to combat skeptical doubts, Godfathers and godmothers to the number of 24 sometimes accompany the baby to the baptismal fount, and little gifts are exchanged and refreshments of sausages, cake, beer and brandy are served before and after the ceremony. The young girls wear wreaths, from which they pick flowers to give to the young godfathers, and these in turn present them with an orange or lemon, which they carry in their hands. They have a curious superstition that the child will die if it receives the name of either parent, and this is only done when they wish it to be the last baby in the family. A grand supper of chocolate, soup and roast pork, with preserves, is served after the baptism, and the festivities end with a dance. Everything begins and ends with a dance in the Harz mountains, and their balls begin at 4 o'clock in the afternoon. - Catholic
