THEGAIT OF THE MAN

ONE PLACE WHERE IT BRINGS OUT HIS CHARACTER.

Watching Men as They Cross the Lobby of a Fashionable Hotel Is a Great Study of Human Nature.

"You can tell with probable certainty man's character, disposition and station in life when you see him cross a ho tel lobby," said an old lobby lounger the other day as he sat down in a chair in other day as he sat down in a chair is one of the big hotels.

"Did you ever sit and watch the people pass? It's an interesting study in human character and the result of human experience. Pride, timidity, assurance, weakness, concentration—all walk before you. They say that these things can be told by a man's manner of walking on the extract or anywhere else, but start him street or anywhere else, but start him over the marble corridor and see how all his traits are emphasized and accentu-

Just then two buds of manhood entered the lobby where the lounger sat. They wore high white collars. They walked hard and laughed loud. One of them stopped at the cigar stand to light a cigarette and called to his comrade to wait. Then they deliberately walked directly oward the bar. They did not try to conceal the fact that they were going toward the hotel's barroom. They did it openly. They even advertised it. Probably they were going to get a very wicked drink. "Do you know," mused the lounger, "that there is a certain atmosphere that can be found only in first class hotels? It is an atmosphere of what might be called sporty gentility. It makes men feel ill it ease unless their clothes are good. To enter the lobby of a fashionable hotel causes some men to talk in words and on subjects that are unusual to them-to put on airs, as it were. Men never hesitate to say:

"I was in the hotel, you know, when I met So-and-so, and he told me,"

"Those two young gentlemen that you just saw enter the bar feel all this. They feel that they would acquire a certain position in the social scale by appearing to be at home in this lobby. But their noisy manner makes it apparent that they wish to advertise their presence, and thus they destroy the impression which they try to create.
"To cross a hotel lobby is something of an event to a man who isn't used to it," continued the lounger, "and that is why personal characteristics stick out all the stronger when he does. Now, the gentle-man who is proud of his looks is sure to give a free exhibition of himself as he walks across the smooth floor. He will square his shoulders and hold out his chest and throw back his haughty head and strut like a proud, plumed thing. You can almost imagine that you see hot You can almost imagine that you see hot flames bursting from his nostrils. He glances from right to left to be certain that he is being closely observed. He acknowledges the smile of the cigar girl with a sweeping salute. He raises his hat and bows grandly to the telegraph girl, and when he has reached the counter where the clerk stands there is a feeling in the lobby not unlike that in the street after the circus parade has passed.

It is a feeling that all is over.
"Not so with the timid, modest gentleman. He will walk hurriedly, as though glad to have the ordeal past. He does not dare to look about him, but he will prob-ably rub his nose or stroke his chin as a shy man does who walks down a long church aisle. He is ashamed to be mak ing himself so prominent. If you speak to this man afterward, you will find that his voice is mild and his manner self de-

"After all," continued the "chair boarder," "the most interesting sight is that of a man whose feet are at home on grass or plowed ground making a voyage over the marble floor of the hotel lobby. Such a one is impressed with the awfulness of the thing. He is panic stricken to begin with, and, then, the stone is so solid that it gives a shock to each foot as he puts it down, so that he lifts it high with each step, like a chicken walking in the wet grass, and, then, there is the constant peril of slipping. The distance across the lobby seems miles. I have seen a man take it by easy stages—walk first to a chair and sneak into it, and then rise gingerly and grit his teeth and start out again full of grim determination. Such a man is sure to be noticed. Just because he longs to be unobserved unkind fate fastens every one's eyes on him.

"There is one type, however," mused the lounger, "that no one notices. He is the man who lives in hotels. He walks across the lobby with as much unconcern as he would into his own house. In fact, I believe that men who have been guests year after year at the same hotel grow to assume a sort of ownership.

"There is another set of individuals whose habits and character are unmis-takable when they appear in the hotels. I belong to this class myself. They call us 'chair warmers,' 'lobby loungers' and other things. In the summer time we fill the row of chairs on the sidewalk in front the row of chairs on the sidewalk in front or sit with our chairs in the street in front and our feet on the edge of the side-walk. We are always on the shady side of the building and in the path of a breeze, if possible. In the winter time we are in the lobby, where it's warm. You can tell us by one certain sign. We are always sitting.

"And the panorama of the lobby goes on-men who strut fiercely and show that they are petty and vain; men who shy and hurry and show that they are timid and nervous; men who walk anxiously and uneasily, showing that they are new and green; men without concern or thought of themselves, showing that they have had experience in such affairs and have business ahead; men who have a hunted look, as though they hadn't paid their laundry bill; young men, who want to be as 'blooded' as the older men; idle men with nothing else to do; bold men, timid men, busy men, vain men, modest men, prosperous men and ne'er do wellsit's a picture that is before me daily as sit here, an interesting picture that study and muse upon."

In southern Italy one of the peculiar customs of the peasants is the wearing of price marks on new suits of clothes. Whereas in other countries the dealer's ticket and tag are removed the moment suit is bought in the sunny toe and here of the European "boot" they are fastened on the tighter and worn until they fall off. The object of this, presumably, is to show neighbors that you have new clothes, bought on-such a day and costing or much at So-and-so's.
