Dr. Leonhardt found in his practice that chronic constipation and its kindred complaints were the result of a dried-up condition of the mucous membrane lining of the stomach and bowels. He investigated further and found that this condition was invariably brought about by the use of eatharties, which all contain a certain amount of resinous matter.

After the finding of the ballot boxes in Phil Lott's barn Reilly was summoned to Shibley's house. Lott offered him $500 in a lump and Shibley offered $25 a week if he would run away to the States. He refused. Byron drove him into Kingston and implored him to skip. Two or three days afterwards Byron went to Regiopolis College and tried a new tack. He said Phil Lott had turned king's evidence. Reilly said if he kissed a block of wood he would consider the oath just as sacred. At the request of Byron Lott, Reilly wrote to the hallot box makers that Lott would pay them a large sum of money if they would stand by him.

Threngh's Terrible Ordesi.

Reilly was shaky and easily rattled. He passed through a terrible ordeal. It was a struggle with his conscience whether he ought to tell everything, but his conscience won out, and apparently nothing was held back. Even his near friends whom he had dragged into the case did not escape. Reilly looks like a man who would tell a straight story. He knows the difference between right and wrong.

One of the amusing features of the examination was the amazement which Reilly exhibited at Phil Lott's which Reilly exhibited at Phil Lott's aste-inding deception. Why Phil had actually represented himself at one stage of the negotiations as Mr. Hughes. After that gross deception Reilly believed that Lott was not a man to be relied on, and said so very plainly.
