

Blunders in Print. This is a most comprehensive title and might include every species of mistake which could possibly find its way into type.

In the present case we may group under it a few examples of the more common errors in print, not only of those directly attributable to the printer, but also of the mistakes resulting from a loose style of composition, as well as those which may occasionally creep into the "copy" even of the careful in the hurry of writing for the press.

In a speech on temperance, not very long ago, Sir Wilfrid Lawson was reported to have alluded to the "spirit of reticence that exalteth a nation," but, of course, the teetotal baronet had used the word "righteousness" where "reticence" did duty.

An orator, in describing the enthusiasm with which a speech of his had been received, made use of the expression, "At that moment the shouts of ten thousand democrats rent the air."

It might possibly be difficult to decide whether the writer or printer was in error when a leading London daily paper made Lord Derby quote the poet thus: "That climax of all earthly ills, That inflammation of our earthly bills."

An absurd blunder appeared in the Parliamentary report of the Daily Telegraph on the occasion of Mr. Gladstone's resolutions on the Eastern policy of Lord Beaconsfield's Government.

Perhaps Irish reporters, owing to the recognized tendency of the soil and climate, are privileged in matters of this kind. One of them, in describing the result of a recent conflict between the police and the people in which fire-arms were used, writes: "In the union infirmary lies John Smith with his shattered leg, which was amputated on Tuesday last."

Now here are incredible blunders to be met with more than in the composition of advertisers, due, no doubt, in some measure, to the restraint imposed by limited space, and it is scarcely possible to look through the columns devoted to these in any of the principal daily papers without meeting numerous instances of the inability of many persons to state exactly what they want, and of very loose use of words and phrases, frequently giving rise to amusing ambiguity.

horse and car." "Wanted, a piano by a lady with modern legs," has before now been seen in the papers. Can that lady have meant to say in some suspicious way that it is her legs which is seen in the charming composition? A piano for sale by a lady who is about to proceed on a long voyage is a very common case.

What is the reasoning of the author of this announcement, which was published in a Manchester paper? "A foreign gentleman could be received into the house of a gentleman who is desirous to learn English conversationally, and would have all home comforts."

Here is another: "A vacancy occurs for a little girl in the family of a motherly lady requiring kind but firm treatment." An advertiser in the London Standard evidently thinks a beast of burden may entertain an objection to carry a person of indifferently moral character when he writes: "Wanted, a quiet pony for an invalid young gentleman that has no vicious habits."

The "other" strongly reminds one of the daily newspaper's "tall but respectably dressed man" of the police courts. Such practices as painting and putting the hair in papers are not entirely unknown in this country, but they have scarcely as yet become recognized family duties, except in the household of an advertiser in a London daily.

What Fifty Years Have Done. The first idea that occurs in a very prolonged retrospect is the prodigious change that has taken place in the social conditions of the country.

Now here are incredible blunders to be met with more than in the composition of advertisers, due, no doubt, in some measure, to the restraint imposed by limited space, and it is scarcely possible to look through the columns devoted to these in any of the principal daily papers without meeting numerous instances of the inability of many persons to state exactly what they want, and of very loose use of words and phrases, frequently giving rise to amusing ambiguity.

When the vendor is of the other sex we have for sale "a massive gentleman's gold watch," or "a rich gentleman's gold chain." No doubt some of those who adopt this style of expression are ready to enter into a defence of it by an argument respecting adjectives and their relation to nouns.

Is a wonderful thing, yet so natural, so reasonable. Why? If you have feelings of grief; too weak and dragging to rally; too nervous to sleep; an appetite hardly sufficient to keep body and soul together; headache, with pains across the back; the whole system relaxed; perhaps coughs and sore lungs; and will use one to six bottles of Dr. G. L. Austin's Phosphatine as the case may demand; it will not fail to make you an enthusiastic friend.

The prescription of a skillful physician and composed of vegetable drugs of great remedial power, Dr. Carson's Stomach and Constipation Bitters purify the blood, give tone and vigor to the system, cures Dyspepsia and Indigestion when all other medicines fail.

Never Give Up. If you are suffering with low and depressed spirits, loss of appetite, general debility, disordered blood, weak constitution, headache, or any disease of a bilious nature, by all means procure a bottle of Electric Bitters.
