A Plea for the Blind.

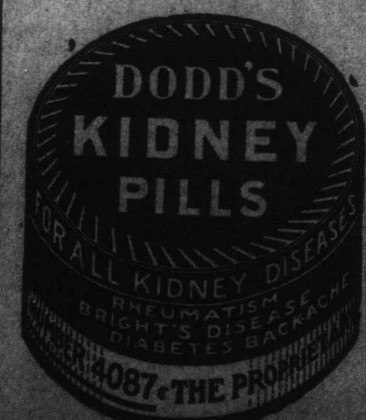

(I.C.M.)

Mr. Howley and others, in their plea for the blind, have so eloquently championed their cause, that there does not seem any necessity for further support. At the same time it may not be out of place to follow up what Mr. Howley has done; as the claim is one that appeals to the better feelings of the public in general, and our entire people are in sympathy with any movement that tends to alleviate the burden of those who suffer. Of the various afflictions which befall the children of men, blindness is one of the saddest; and it claims its victims from every walk of life, and every community contributes its share to its ranks. In Newfoundland there are some five hundred and fifty blind persons. Of this number, about one hundred and fifty are young and in the prime of life, and if given a chance, the majority of these could become self-supporting. Up to the present time not much has been done locally, in the matter of training or teaching these afflicted ones; but of late a movement in this direction has been instituted, and considerable progress made.

This effort is largely due to the efforts of Mr. Weir, who, though himself blind, has displayed commendable zeal, and sincerity of purpose, on behalf of his "comrades of darkness." In the past Mr. Weir's work has been devoted to the school for the blind at Halifax, at which institution his record stands the highest. He now feels called upon to champion the interests of his fellows here at home, in his own land, and among his own people. Already he has set the machinery in motion, and his success so far has awakened high hopes in many hearts. For this Mr. Weir is grateful, as well as jubilant, and his optimism is inspiring, thus he is pushing on, and cherishes high hopes of ultimate success. Mr. Weir's object is to have a centre, or headquarters for his work. This he has produced by the munificent gift of Waterford Hall, made by that prince of philanthropists, Sir Edgar Bowring. With such a building as Waterford Hall, and with such ideal surroundings, and all so near the city, the greater portion of the initial work may be considered accomplished. But this is not all Mr. Weir has succeeded in doing, he has communicated with the government, and interviewed the Premier, and has a conditional guarantee of a vote for the sum of twenty-five thousand dollars, and an annual vote of the sum of ten thousand dollars. This is certainly good, and what is better, or at least, equally as good, is the fact that the conditions under which these sums are to be granted, are already virtually fulfilled.

Just at present it would seem that some doubt exists in the mind of the people as to the attitude of the government toward its guarantee to Mr. Weir. For this doubt there may be just cause; as the government, like all other corporations, and like business concerns the world over, feels the effects of universal financial stringency; but this embarrassment will pass off in due time, and better days will follow, and what appears impossible to-day, will be quite possible to-morrow. To judge the chance of government aid for such an institution as Mr. Weir represents, from the depression of the present time, would indeed be a mistake, and almost fatal to the cause. Therefore there is room for hope that the good work will succeed, and that at no very distant date the solitude of Waterford Hall will resound with the sounds of willing hands, and happy hearts, who though deprived of sight, are nevertheless willing to do their part towards independence and self-support.

To assist in this worthy task is the common duty of the public and the government; and we feel assured that every heart within our land, and thousands of hearts in other lands, will respond to the wish that occupies such a big place in Mr. Weir's heart; and all will hope that Waterford Hall will soon be in his possession as a centre of training for some of our afflicted countrymen. With this accomplished a new day will have dawned for many of those afflicted with blindness; and from an economic, as well as from a humanitarian standpoint, the situation will be improved. Thus will hope come to the lives that otherwise must despair, and joy to hearts that otherwise must be sad; and occupation will usurp monotony. Such is the task which Mr. Weir has undertaken, and as such it has the sympathy of the public and the government. Therefore we say to Mr. Weir, go on in your good work, and in due time many of the children of darkness will rise up and call you blessed.

Editor Evening Telegram

Dear Sir—I have been requested to publish a paper on reformatory work by the audience who heard it read. I now ask your kind permission for space to do so in the pages of the most widely read paper in the Dominion. This article was read in January after a visit to the Industrial Association's meeting. This was a work in which we expected to find a very large number of most prominent citizens. What we did find was a small band (only numerically small) of most earnest, big hearted, energetic workers, who were trying to do their own share and the part of every other citizen. Every denomination was well represented, but only the few doing the work. 'Twas the call to arouse; Wake up! which this paper calls for. How many know about the work? How many knowing, care to interest themselves? We are often asked, "this work of trying to redeem, uplift, is it worth while?" Unquestionably it is! If the writer had any doubts on that score, they were forever dispelled by a visit to Jensen Camp and an enquiry into the work. Captain Cran of the Salvation Army was in charge then, and before the visit was ended, I didn't wonder any more why she exerted such an influence, why the girls loved her, for I was in love too. It isn't work that everyone can do, it requires special graces. The Army officers are specially fitted by training, by a deep love for humanity, by a strong endeavour to follow the Master's example, for this kind of work. Most people will concede they succeeded where others fail. What the Captain had accomplished in a short time was marvellous and only needed more time to stabilize and make permanent the good work begun. But, alas, circumstances made it impossible for the Captain to remain, but very fortunately the Association was able to secure the services of a whole-hearted worker and Miss Benedict has continued to work wonders. We citizens will have a chance to see some of the work accomplished in the window display. But the great pity is Capt. Cran nor Miss Benedict could not remain to carry on this work any length of time. We trust the same kindness, firmness and patience they have exerted. Financing this home is a problem these strenuous days but the work should not be abandoned. In a few weeks it rests heavily—big numbers would lighten the load. Is there in this city of St. John's, with a population of, say, 40,000, is there two hundred individuals who are patriotic, large-hearted, charitable enough to contribute one dollar each, a month, toward the upkeep of this home? If so the financial problem is solved. Its cheaper to make good citizens than maintain prisoners. If some of the criminal waste this country yearly undergoes were conserved, then our blind, our homeless, our incorrigibles, might all have their chance to make good given them, as other countries have. Thanking you in anticipation, Yours sincerely,

M. F. CAMPBELL.

(The first installment of the paper read by Mrs. Campbell, will be published in the Telegram early next week, and it is commended to all who think—Editor)
