THE BRITISH CHALLENGE

The advertisement in the Telegram on Tuesday of the British Industrial Fair to be held at London and Birmingham from February 15th to the 26th, is a departure from the former trade methods followed by Great Britain, and will everywhere be noted of 14 per centum, levied on rents, is with gratification. It is a hand across the sea which invites a allmost the lowest of any American business-like grip; it is a ringing challenge to the world, and has otty. in it the unmistakable note of confidence—superiority, if you will—that has helped the race right through history to do and dare where others had failed.

Is Britain vanquished? Is she so overladen with debt that safety she cannot possibly again lift her head? Has she meekly given In my mail this day do find the folher pride of place in trade and commerce to her rivals? The answer to such questions is given in the words of Shakespeare. and they are as true to-day as they were over three hundred years ago:-

> This England never did, nor never shall, Lie at the proud foot of a conqueror. . . . Nought shall make us rue. If England to herself do rest but true.

Burdened with debt! Yes, and carrying the burden of others as well. Stricken! Yes, and sorely, but when, in all her glorious past, have conditions similar to these been the occasion to sound the retreat? Rather have they brought out the very best qualities of the race, for it can be said with absolute truth and without ostentation that wherever the British Flag to be held in Feild College Hall on flies it has been planted and kept aloft by the spirit which laughs at dangers and finds in every difficulty only another op- made by Mr. E. Jerrett and already a portunity to overcome it. Where others may look for the signal to retire, the British anticipates the word to advance.

Britain to-day is fighting to regain the trade which force a very enjoyable affair are advised to of circumstances compelled her to relinquish to others, who hand their names to the organizer as were less disposed to see in what direction their path of duty led. Now as then, she is inviting her dominions to co-operate. Now as then, her rivals are misled into the belief that the spirit of co-operation is non-existent. Now as then, Britons from east to west and from north to south will rally to the Flag, their Flag.

There was no call for assistance eleven years ago. It was an invitation to unite in upholding the traditions of the race. There is no call for help in the challenge flung out to-day by Great Britain. It is in the nature of a proud gesture, which will terous round trip passage of 13 days. inspire her peoples the world over to take heart again as she The Susu brought a full inward carhas done, surmount their difficulties, and face the future with sengers:—Rev. We have heard so much of the gloom and depression existing in British industrial circles that we have failed to perceive the giant strides taken in the last year or two. Behind the milthe giant strides taken in the last year or two. Behind the milthe giant strides taken in the last year or two. Behind the milchild, Way; Misses Mercer, Hicks,

The trip was one of sold by the underwriters or any auhandful of agitators we have failed to grasp the fact that their the worst in the captain's experience, thorized person, excepting at prices influence counts for no more in the calm deliberations of the with heavy seas. Because the order for a small vessel like the Caribou was Fogo. Despite the stormy weather ports is to buy the stock dishonestly. ced in Holland, we are inclined to believe that the British all ports of call were made as far as shipyards are all idle. It is true that their activities for some time have been restricted, but it is far from the truth to say that output has ceased. British engineers, as before, are carrying lar interest among St. John's ladies out giant operations in many parts of the world, and the motor exhibit at Olympia recently was a triumph of British skill and ingenuity.

Britain to-day in spite of her heavy obligations can still find in the depths of her purse sufficient millions to repay her debts and at the same time to meet her many responsibilities.

What of her ships that carry the flag to every corner of the world? And what of the Armada that was to supplant them but a few years ago on the ocean trade routes? Money without limit was expended on the latter, and to-day most of those ships have found their way to Henry Ford's scrap heap. It is not money that decides such an issue, but the spirit of the race which knows not defeat.
