SICK HEADACHE

Headache, yet Carter's Little Liver Pills are equally valuable in constipation, curing and preventing this annoying complaint, while they also correct all disorders of the stomach, stimulate the liver and regulate the bowels. Even if they only cure one headache, they are worth the price.

HEAD

ACHE

As the base of so many lives that have been wrecked by the use of the bottle of pills, it is not surprising that Carter's Little Liver Pills are very small and very easy to take. One or two pills make a dose. They are strictly vegetable and do not grip or purge, but by their gentle action, please all who use them. In vials of 25 cents; five for $1. Sold by druggists everywhere, or sent by mail.

DIANA WENTWORTH,

Or, The Professor's Daughter.

"Yes, I was in Whitfield yesterday and saw the Sherlocks, who told me everything. I cannot express my thankfulness that such people as you and they exist. Where is Diana? Can I see her?"

"I will send her to you. She is very delicate, and the surprise will be very great. She had quite given you up."

"Ah!" he said, "will you tell me all about it? Perhaps there are things I had better know before I see her."

"They talked for a quarter of an hour, and then Toineau rose, saying to Mr. and Mrs. Wentworth, 'I will send her to you; you are very anxious to see her, and it is not fair to keep her longer in ignorance.'"

She had scarcely spoken, before the door was opened from the outside, and they heard Diana speaking to a servant.

"Thank you," she was saying, could trouble yourself about it. I will ask Mrs. Burdett myself."

Toineau, glancing at John, saw how shocked he was to hear the slow languid voice, which yet he could not doubt to be Diana's. He would have gone to meet her, but Toineau laid a restraining hand upon his arm, and he waited.

Diana came in, looking taller and slimmer than ever—her face seemed very small, her eyes very large; she took two or three steps forward and then stopped. A change like an illumination passed over her face, and she said:

"John!"

She would have fallen, but he caught her in time, and when she could look round she found that Toineau had gone.

The next fortnight was a very busy one. There was little time for anything else than necessary work. Susan came up for the wedding and was one of the witnesses of the ceremony. A few days later Mr. and Mrs. Garthwaite sailed for Brazil, and Susan returned to her stewardship at Becktop farm.

Diana and Gertrude did meet again. One summer evening, when the sun had set, and the moon was shining, Gertrude was returning home from some visits she had been making to some of the cottage people. She walked slowly; it was an exquisite evening, the time of

The clear dusk of heaven, which brings the thickest stars.

There was a thin moon in the sky; a red glow of sunset still lingered in the West. Very clearly did objects stand out against the sky; and Gertrude, as she stood still and looked round her, became conscious that the rise a little way in front of her there stood, sharply outlined against the pale, clear sky, the figure of a child on a pony.

Her heart beat fast. She had heard, and had not tried to hide that Mr. and Mrs. Garthwaite had come down to the cottage which had lately been built for them close to Becktop farm. She had even seen the cottage, drawn to it by an irresistible longing to see Diana. It was not large, and, built of rough-hewn, gray native stone, it was in perfect harmony with the scene in which it stood. She had been thinking of Diana as she walked along, recalling her deep, passionate love for this very place, and trying to still the yearning for her which filled her heart. She had heard rumors of a child, and her pulse beat excitedly as she saw this small, upright figure alone in this wild place. She had half hoped, half feared it would be gone before she reached the spot where it stood; but it was not, and when she reached the spot she stopped because she could not have gone on. She stood and looked at the child; he seemed 5 or 6 years old, and he sat on his pony like a little man. He had Diana's face and eyes, and something else which, though she had but seen John Garthwaite once, she recognized as his. Drawing near she laid her hand on the pony's rein, and said:

"What is your name, my boy?"

The child took off his hat as he answered, "John Garthwaite; but they always call me Jack."

Gertrude noted the name. No Meredith had ever been called John.

"Have you no other name?" she asked.

"No," answered the child, with a little laugh; "I don't want two. Mother says John is the finest name in the world."

"What are you doing here?" she asked further.

"Waiting for mother. She has gone to see some people in a cottage, but they have scarlet fever, so she would not let me go in with her."

"Gertrude's heart leaped. If she waited a little she would see Diana. Meantime she would talk to this child—Diana's child! How odd it seemed.

"Are you not afraid to be here alone?" she continued.

"Why should I be afraid? Mother says no one is afraid for himself unless he has done wrong. Besides, I have mother to take care of; father gave her into my care. Father is called John, too," he added, with a child's innocence. "Do you know," he went on, waxing confidential, "when I first saw you over the hill I thought you were mother coming; wasn't it dreadful?"

He finished, with a delighted peal of laughter.

FUN, FACTS AND FICTION

To Catch the Wolf.—Friend of the Family.—What in the world are you setting that trap on the front steps for? Young Hopeful.—To catch the wolf. He said that if he ordered any more of those peaches we should have the wolf at the door, and she's gone and done it, for I heard her.

A man's wife should always be the same, especially to her husband; but if she is weak and nervous and uses Carter's Little Liver Pills, she cannot be for they will make her "real" and "different person," at least so they say, and their husbands say so, too.

Spend less nervous energy each day than you make.

Carter's Little Liver Pills must not be confused with common Cathartic or Purgative Pills, as they are entirely unlike them in every respect. One trial will prove their superiority.

Among the pains and aches caused with marvelous rapidity with Dr. Thomas' Electrolytic Oil, is ear-ache. The young are especially subject to it, and the desirability of this Oil as a family remedy is enhanced by the fact that it is admirably adapted not only to the above ailment, but also to the hurts, disorders of the bowels, and affections of the throat, to which the young are specially subject.

It seems now to be very certain that William Tell did not refuse to bow to Gessler's hat. What Mr. Tell really did was to ask Mr. Gessler where he got it.

An Odd Purse.

Mr. P. J. Slater, Toronto agent of the Pullman Company, recently received this dispatch from Conductor George Shields relative to a lady's alleged loss of over $400 in the Pullman car Sicily, between Toronto and Cobourg:

"Lady who lost her pocketbook, checks, ticket, and money in car Sicily at Cobourg found them in her trunk."

Dr. Wild and the Red-Whiskered Man.

In his sermon last evening Rev. Dr. Wild dwelt at length on the Oka Indians question, and criticized the letter of Hon. Mr. Deneau very harshly. Part of the audience applauded. A comical incident occurred. While the doctor was in the midst of his exordium the door next the pulpit opened, a face surrounded with red hair and red whiskers appeared, a man's voice shouted, "How about the Jesuites?" the face disappeared and the door shut. The audience was electrified.—(Toronto Empire.)

Are the Main Drains and Sewers of Our Cities Plugged as Often as They Should Be?

We recently had the opportunity of conversing with a Sanitary Engineer of one of our largest cities regarding city drains and sewers, and knowing that gentlemen to be thoroughly posted on the subject, asked him the question: "Are the main drains and sewers of this city plugged as often as they should be?"

"Well, sir, that is a most important question, and very few of our citizens ever give the matter a thought," replied the Sanitarian.

"This ought to be a question of great importance to all good citizens who are interested in the public health," we ventured to say.

"Yes," said the Sanitarian, "the health of all large cities and towns depends in a great measure upon the good working of sewers and drains, and I must admit, our sanitarians are not sufficiently alive to the great necessity of frequent cleanings and disinfection. It is owing to this criminal negligence that so much disease prevails in large centers of population. We hear our doctors speaking of fevers, diphtheria, blood poisoning and sickness generally—well, sir, it is the result of, not only filthy and poisonous sewers and drains, but of ill-constructed and impure traps. The sanitary regulations of our city are fairly good, but the laws are not enforced rigidly enough."

Here is a state of things that must surprise most careful and indifferent, and lead to serious contemplation and thought. The inhabitants of our large cities and towns, being thus assured that sanitary laws and regulations are not properly enforced, should with great care look to the safety of themselves and families. Great care should be taken of those who are not strong and robust, and of those who are predisposed to disease.

The loving wife and mother on whom so many cares devolve in the management of home and children, may be weak, languid, morose, and sleepless; her brain power has been strained to such a degree, that she has become a victim of melancholia. It may be that the bread-winner of the family has been overworked, and that his nervousness has laid hold of him. He drops a feeble and unsteady; his hands tremble, and his whole system out of gear. Some loved son or daughter, or brother or sister may suffer from some of the above named ailments. Dyspepsia, indigestion, neuralgia, or Rheumatism.

Reader, if any suffer from the ailments just mentioned, their position is a terribly dangerous one in view of the unsanitary condition of our large cities and towns. They are fit subjects for any prevailing fever and disease, as they do not possess the vitality to resist them.

You can insure their safety and health in one way—simply by making use of Paine's Celery Compound. It is a builder of nerve, and builds up the system. Sluggish and impure blood is made to course through the body, as nature intended, and the whole system of digestion is rendered easy and natural.

Paine's Celery Compound, aided by moderate exercise and frequent bathing, will give to man or woman that perfect life and vigor which no other medicine can bestow. Physicians in Canada and United States prescribe it daily and recommend it to all.
