LACROSSE. STAND UP, CHATHAM!

Detroit Free Press: An echo of last

Thursday's lacrosse game, in which Detroit beat Chatham 16 to 3, was heard yesterday, when a letter was forwarded to the C. L. A., acquainting the officials of the fact that Chatham had two outside players on its team, thus viosaid. According to the Detroit players, this action is not taken for revenge for the Brusso episode, but to show the association there are other teams that come under the professional ban. The fact that Chatham was exonerated and Detroit professionalized for the last game hastened action on the part of the locals to set themselves right. Manager Brusso said yesterday: "Nearly all the teams in Canada are breaking the rules governing professionalism. Chatham played Lawlor and Tierney, two Wallaceburg players, here under assumed names, and only con-sented to finish Thursday's game after establishing my identity, when we informed them that they had two outside men on the team. One of the Chatham officials also offered two Detroit players, Bowman and Johnson, alluring inducements to play in a future game in Canada. Chatham is not the only club that has violated the rules, but several other cases can be cited. The Detroit club only wishes to get a THE JOURNAL EXPLAINS.

WO-THIRDS of a Semi-ready suit is skilled labor.

One-third only of the total cost is for clotn. Therefore, any cloth which works easiest and shapes best, with least labor, is the most economical.

Ninety per cent. of all Semi-ready cloths are, on this account, English and Scotch importations, because these are found to be softer in fibre, and more readily shaped, by the needle, than domestic cloths.

They retain shape, and color longer, can be rejuvenated at any time by "pressing," and do not shrink from perspiration, as even the best Canadian goods are liable to do.

Their higher cost is offset by the saving on skilled labor, while their durability is incomparably greater.
