"Well, never mind; you'll pick yourself up by degrees, I imagine," was the smiling reply. "I am satisfied to find you as you are, for you've had quite a serious time of it, my friend." "I begin to remember something-I was thrown from my carriage—and Eddie—where is Eddie?" Philip questioned, consciousness beginning to as-

The doctor now turned a puzzled look upon Arley, for this was the first he had heard about Eddle. "Eddie is well; he escaped unhurt, and has been well cared for ever since

It should have been mentioned before that Lady Elaine, at Arley's request, had gone to Philip's chambers to make inquiries regarding the lad, and had found him well, but greatly distressed upon his uncle's account. "Oh, I cannot have him die, too!" he cried, when he had told her all about they feared Mr. Paxton could not live.
