Quiet being restored, the play proceeded Presently Mr. Marks announced that Mr. Cutler and bride would be presented to the audience as they had been married earlier in the evening, and he asked for kind considerations on the part of the audience. The second act being completed, the curtain was lowered, and then gently ascended. The crowd half-raised in their seats craned their necks, jostled each other to get a better view, and finally Jacob and his bride appeared, smiling and bowing to the audience. The crowd again went into a frenzy of excitement and laughter, as a large bouquet of cabbages, carrots, and sundry other vegetables was brought in and presented to Jake. This was clamax, after which the curtain was rung down, and the couple withdrew.
