LONDON, FRIDAY, SEPT. 1.

Today's Inauguration.

The birth of two provinces is an im ortant event in the life of this coun ry, and is being celebrated today with oming splendor. The ceremonies the Governor-General, the Prime in area greater than the New England States or than any half dozen states of the American Union, omitting Texas. They are destined to become the home of millions. They are being peopled nore rapidly by immigration than any corresponding area on the continent. Owing to the cosmopolitan character of the population, problems of governfnent will arise, from which the older provinces have been almost exempt, In Quebec two races have managed to work out these problems satisfactorily. In the other provinces the population has been homogeneous or almost so. In Alberta and Saskatchewan there are many races, many creeds, and many languages. Fortunately the direction of affairs, during the next few years at least, when the new provinces will become adjusted to the framework of their new constitution, will be in the hands of Western Canadians, who have had public experience as members of the Territorial Legislature or the Dominion Parliament. With the safeguard of the naturalization laws and the preponderance of English-speaking immigrants, there is little fear that the to protest? foreign elements will create insoluble difficulties, or exercise an undue influence upon legislation.

Probably difficulties of a constitutional character will arise from time to provinces. These are inseparable from a federal system, but the worst of ter much litigation and very serious friction and ill-feeling, culminating in good citizenship. In Nova Scotia and New Brunswick systems of education were framed which have proved satisfactory to members of all creeds. In Manitoba a note of dissatisfaction is occasionally heard from representatives | The Philadelphia Record points out that the Hudson Bay Company is a very healthy Canadian institution. Its $\frac{1}{2}$ to shares, of which there are 100,000, have recently risen from $50 to $\frac{2}{2}$ to $\frac{1}{2}$ and this must also be withheld from the reader, though in a sense it may mar the story. | Mr. Grant was given a large, com-Manitoba a note of dissatisfaction occasionally heard from representatives $100 shares, of which there are 100,000, have recently risen from $50 to $350 a share.
