CHINESE MEN COME, WIVES SHOULD ALSO

"No Home Ties" Blamed For Bad Habits.

Should the way be made easier for Chinese women to join their husbands in Canada? According to Mr. A. E. Welch, superintendent of the Chinese Christian Association in London, who has just returned home from Toronto after attending a conference of workers among the Chinese in Ontario, the convention was strongly of the opinion that the "shocking" exclusion law which keeps out Chinese wives and children drives the men to habits which Canadians condemn, but which Canadian men might be in danger of falling into if deprived of all home associations.

"The Chinese people are very domesticated," said Mr. Welch to the women's department of The Advertiser. "We have seen right in our own city what good husbands and fathers and citizens the Chinese men prove when they bring their wives and children here. Just imagine what might become of Canadian men if cut off entirely from their family ties, the influence of their women folk and the home atmosphere. Workers among the Chinese feel that if the men are allowed to come, conditions will be much better if it is not made so difficult for the women to enter. So far as the Chinese women are concerned, they are a factor for the women workers to handle. They are most responsive to the advances of Canadian women, and to sympathy and interest. If the children are brought up under Christian as well as Canadian influences, they will develop into good Canadian citizens. We have in London little Chinese boys who have been here practically all their lives, and who are growing up fine, manly chaps, an example to Canadian boys of British ancestry."

Students Coming.
"A problem discussed at the convention which must be dealt with promptly and effectively is that arising from the number of Chinese boys under the age of sixteen who are coming into Canada as students, and hence are not deterred from entering the country. Not long ago, it was reported, 125 of them arrived in Canada to be distributed to all parts of the Dominion. The manner in which we treat these boys will in large measure determine their future attitude towards Canada and Christianity."

"They will naturally be homesick and hungry for the kindness and sympathy of the Christian atmosphere. If we surround them with this, good and well."

"In past years, the Chinese coming here have been largely from the lower classes. Now, we are beginning to get the literate, the thinking, educated people. It has been demonstrated that Chinese make very sincere converts to Christianity and that they are, indeed, better 'stickers' than many white people."

"A story told which very much impressed the convention was that of a young man of the intellectual class in China who was interested in Christianity, but wanted to see how it worked out in a Christian country before embracing it for himself. He came to Canada, was educated and deceived, and about to return to the Orient bitter and disillusioned when he met, by what some people would call accident, a man who was a glorious Christian."

"Through this new acquaintance, the young Chinese got an entirely new conception of Christianity and Christian people, and returned to his own country to give to his people the gospel of Jesus Christ. That is an instance which illustrates the importance of giving to the Chinese newcomers, and especially the young students now coming in, a true conception of what Christianity and Canadianism at its best stand for."

"It is an unfortunate thing that so often the Chinese have been grossly misunderstood, treated as unknowable aliens, when, in reality, no people are more ready to smile back in response to friendship proffered to them."

"With the arrival of young Chinese lads as students in London, we will need a number more of consecrated women to undertake the task of teaching them."

Happy Season For Stout Women

BY MARIAN HALE.

NEW YORK, Nov. 10.—There is one consoling thought today for many women and it is that while many of our fashions are shown upon tantalizingly slender figures, most of the modes may be adapted to almost any avoirdupois. Naturally bouffant garments are the flapper's very own.

But the straight lines and flowing sleeves, the adaptation of the straight lines, belong to almost any age and figure.

An especially attractive model is the Louis Grauer gown of draped damour embroidered in steel beads. It is indeed a "perfect love" of a dress.

The long-waisted effect, with cording over the hips, and the long shoulders with full sleeves tend toward grace and figure.

The designs of head, embroidered in two rows on the sleeves and skirt and one around the neck, add that touch of gaiety which all the season's frocks demand.

What Women Are Accomplishing In London.

HOUSE COMMITTEE MEETS.
The "Lenmore" house committee, of which Mrs. S. L. Taylor is convener, met Thursday afternoon to discuss business in connection with the Y. W. C. A. residence at 187 King street.

HOLD FASHION SHOW.
A fashion show was given at Lenmore by Smallman & Ingram's at the request of the Blue Triangle Cabinet for the federation of the Y. W. C. A. industrial clubs, which met Thursday night. The study of the home to which the federation is giving attention, was taken up with relation to finances. Many suits were shown, chiefly tailored and in the dark shades. Miss Wrigley, superintendent of the girls at Smallman & Ingram's, pointed out the good quality of the exhibits, stating that they were not cheap, but were good buying. She also explained to the girls the different qualities of the materials, impressing upon them the great necessity of knowing wearing values. Various little afternoon and semi-evening dresses were shown in cotton crepes and serge, also simple evening dresses, the patterns of which could easily be copied and made up by the girls themselves. Bungalow dresses and house dresses were also exhibited in gingham and prints.

The federation held a supper before the fashion show, after which a short discussion followed, in which plans were formed for Christmas service.

WOMEN ORGANIZE TO BACK MR. WHITE

Mrs. Edwards, Convener, and Ward Conveners Appointed.

Women supporters of Mr. Frank White in the federal election campaign held a well-attended meeting on Thursday afternoon in the National Liberal and Conservative clubrooms, over the Majestic Theatre, to deal with business in connection with organization for work and other plans in connection with the campaign. Mrs. A. T. Edwards, convener of the women's organization, presided, and gave a most practical talk on organization and its importance in carrying any project or campaign to a successful issue. She also dealt with Mr. Meighen's platform, advancing reasons why it should receive the support of women. Other speakers of the afternoon were Messrs. E. R. Dennis, Childs and Fred Lawra-son.

Mrs. E. R. Seabrook and Mrs. A. B. Greer accepted the responsibilities of the convener of ward 1; Mrs. Guymer was elected convener for ward 2; Mrs. A. E. Tutt and Mrs. Harry Winnett joint conveners for ward 3, and Mrs. C. H. Zeigler, convener for ward 4. Mrs. Edwards announced a meeting to receive reports from ward conveners to be held on Friday afternoon, Nov. 18.

CRAWLY CRAB HELPS

[By Olive Roberts Barton.]

Crawly Crab was dilled into view.

When the silly old cotton-spinner (one of the Wiggledin people, you know) coughed out his tummy right through his mouth, and the pink pearl rolled out on the white sand at the bottom of the ocean, the Twins stared till their eyes nearly dropped out. But what could they do, when Mr. Cotton-Spinner had them done up like parcels in his white wrapping string?

"Oh, ho! Ha, ha! Hee, hee!" laughed the thief. "Isn't that a fine pocket-book to have, my dears? And think how safe it is! You'd never lose pennies down the boardwalk if you could swallow 'em and then cough them up when you wished to buy a folly-pop. That's the way it is with my pink pearl. I'll always keep it safe and sound."

With these words Mr. Cotton-Spinner pulled in his ridiculous paper-bag of a stomach, and swallowed the pink pearl again for safe keeping.

Suddenly a voice said: "What's this I hear about swallowing pink pearls? Who did?"

"I did!" answered Cukie Cotton-Spinner with a howl. "I have it here in my tummy right now."

"I don't believe you!" declared the voice again and Crawly Crab waddled into view.

"What! You don't! I'll show you!" declared Cukie, blowing out his tummy again, with the pink pearl inside. But he was suspicious of Crawly and would not let go. "Here, you may feel it," he said. "It's that hard place."

But now comes the amazing part my dears: Crawly took his snippers and cut Mr. Cotton-Spinner's stomach off before you could sneeze with one snip. Next he cut the threads around the Twins and set them free.

"Don't worry about Mr. Cukie's stomach!" he said. "He'll grow a new one in three days. There's your pearl, children!"
