The cance was found upside down, but nothing was seen or heard of Joy down, but nothing was seen or heard of Joy until last week, when Harry Mumery, who was watching a deer run into King Lake, sawa man's shoe come up where the animal jumped in. The water was about a foot deep and on investigating the body was found. Only the bones remained, while weeds had grown through the clothing. There was a lot of nails and carbridges in the pockets and the weight had doubtless kept the body down. The victim had left a house which he was building to go on the hunt, where he met his death.
