Frank Westwood's Death Does Not Solve the Mystery.

THE POLICE UTTERLY IN THE DARK

The Inquest May Throw Some Light on the Affair.

After Battling With Death for Three Days the Victim of Saturday Night's Shooting in Parkdale Dies From His Wounds—Cause of the Post-Mortem Examination—An Inquest Ordered for Friday Evening.

Frank Westwood, the victim of the mysterious shooting at his father's house at the foot of Jameson-avenue, on Saturday night last, passed away without pain at 6 o'clock yesterday morning. From the time that his vitality began to sink and his ultimate death became a matter of certainty, the agony he had suffered was his own. On the afternoon of Tuesday, when his ante-mortem statement was taken, he talked rationally and well, and before he became unconscious altogether he spoke chiefly of the lake and of nautical matters, which had for him an intense interest when he was alive and well.

While he lay dying and while the city was wrapped in a mass of rumor, theory and uncertainty, with hardly a proven fact to go upon, there was a hope that death, when it came, would at least assist in clearing up the mystery. The hope was fruitless. The mystery is no nearer solution than it was four days ago.

Coroner Orr swore out a warrant for an inquest at "Lakeside Hall" at 11.15. About noon a jury was empaneled, composed as follows: H. W. McKinnon, foreman; James Hunter, W. H. Rumsey, Joseph Lemay, G. W. Watkins, G. S. Booth, F. Dean, J. A. Harrison, Richard Duff, J. H. Partridge, and J. W. Todd.

The jurors viewed the body and the wound and were shown the supposed scene of the crime. The inquest was adjourned until Friday at 8 p.m. at No. 6 Police Station. The ante-mortem statement already published in "The World" today this statement throws no light on the mystery. In it young Westwood positively states that the man who called him to the door was not Gus Clark, the young man with whom he had the dispute when the latter was in the street. He is alleged to be attempting to effect an entrance to W. H. B. Clement's house, where he had been staying, and that he called on the telephone to Mrs. Westwood, who was at home at the time. Westwood was however, by no means clear in his mind, and his statements were somewhat confused. He stated that he had seen a man who he believed to be the assassin, and that he was in the street at the time.

The Post-Mortem. Dr. John Caven, in the presence of Dr. Loyd, the family physician, and Dr. Cameron, Peters and Orr, conducted a post-mortem examination of the body.

The post-mortem showed that the bullet entered the right side of the chest, about the level of the axilla, and passed through the liver, close to the kidney, and lodged in the spinal column at the back, one-half inch from the skin. It traversed a straight course clear through the body. There was evidence of a great deal of internal hemorrhage—in fact, the doctor says that the amount of blood lost was about 1000 cc. The bullet was either a .38 or a .44 Smith & Wesson caliber. The post-mortem effectually dispelled the persistent rumor in Parkdale that the deceased was being treated prior to the shooting for some disease other than liver complaint.

Waiting for the Inquest. The police authorities do not expect that something will turn up at the inquest which will furnish them with the clue to the work which they are no nearer a solution of the mystery than they were at 10.50 Saturday night, when first intimations of the tragedy were telephoned to No. 6 Station. The searching of the house of Mr. Henry H. Westwood, and the finding of a revolver, of which the particular significance while the stories of several women in the locality that they saw a man in the street shortly before the shooting are equally devoid of significance, since it is generally admitted that these parties saw the victim himself that those parties saw.

What His Elder Brother Says. Mr. Bert Westwood, the elder brother of the deceased, was interviewed at considerable length by a World reporter. "On what terms were you with your brother?" was asked.

"The very best, although I have seen very little of Frank for some years past. Since I was married a year ago I have lived with my father-in-law, Mr. Henry H. Westwood, at the corner of Maynard-avenue and Leppold-street, and previously when I lived at home I was continually on the road and knew nothing of my brother's private affairs. His conduct was much more about him in that respect than I do."

"How do you account for the reaction of the detectives in searching your residence last night?"

"There was no search made of the house. They only looked through my secretary, which opened myself. They called me away from my brother's bedside to inquire into a little matter of private correspondence which I could have explained if I had had my summer clothes on."

FOUND OUT IT WAS LOADED.

Will Joyce, a Brampton Lad, Probably Finally Shot By His Brother Herbert.

Brampton, Oct. 10.—To-night at about 8.30 Herbert Joyce, a boy about 18, employed in the Brampton Office, shot his brother, William, a lad of a year or two younger, with a shot gun, loaded with rammers, with a shot gun, loaded with rammers, with a shot gun, loaded with rammers.

The whole charge struck the boy in the forehead at not more than 20 feet range, and the only wonder is that he was not instantly killed. Dr. Hoagie was summoned, but further than giving him temporary relief and dressing the wound, he is doing nothing. He is arranging to take him to the Toronto Hospital to-night.

It appears the youths were alone, when Will playfully told his brother to point the gun at him and see if it was loaded, which was done. He is now almost wild with grief at his rash act.

The Toronto Brewing and Malting Co., Limited, Toronto, Ont., Oct. 3, 1894.

Editor World: Dear Sir,—Referring to the advertisement of Mr. William Mara, 79 Yonge-street, in your issue of this date and in several other recent issues of your paper, offering what he alleges to be his own bottling of our ale at 90 cents per dozen quarts, for 60 per dozen quarts, and to state that he had sold Mr. Mara our regular price for ale for bottling purposes since Oct. 25, 1893.

While, even if we cared to try, we could not prevent Mr. Mara from trying to injure us by advertising our ale for sale at these prices, we consider that we owe it to our customers and to the public to state that we have charged Mr. Mara our regular price for ale for bottling purposes, and to point out that if Mr. Mara sells our ale at the prices above mentioned, he sells from his last purchase made a year ago.

We caution the public against purchasing bottled ale alleged by anyone to be our ale, which is not in bottles bearing our diamond-shaped labels with registered trade-mark thereon.

VENDETTA OF FRENCH RIVER

IT THREATENS TO RIVAL THAT OF FAR-FAMED COUSIN.

Five Brothers Have Sworn to Take the Life of Provincial Detective McEae, Who Shot Down a Member of the Family in the Discharge of His Duty—McEae Here for Reinforcements.

In the corridor of the Palmer House last night sat a powerful man with a tanned and weather-beaten face. It was Provincial Detective Duncan McEae, who a month ago last Saturday, in the discharge of his duty, shot and killed William Pratt at French River.

When a World reporter entered the hotel the former popular Toronto policeman arose from his seat and genially accented him. "I'm not dead yet, you see," said he, "although your Parry Sound correspondent wired you that I was killed. Your man was very nearly right, though, for it was mere luck that averted the misadventure."

"What am I here for, did you say?" went on the detective. "I am here to try and get assistance from the authorities to rout out the Prout gang and rid the district of the pest from which we have so long suffered. The man who met his death at my hands was only one of six ruffianly desperadoes all brothers. The other five, George, Frank, Edmund, John and Bunney, are still at large unfortunately, committing in these deeds and scaring the neighborhood."

Five Against One. "True, I'm not a weak man, but what chance do I have against five?" asked each one of whom stands nearly six-feet without his shoes? "I want some help. When I get it we will go back and capture these fellows or die in the attempt."

There are no less than 27 warrants out against these men for breaking into lighthouses, stealing mail and burglarizing generally. Just before I left French River, the keeper of the lighthouse gave me information that they were on their way to capture the lighthouse, and I considered it useless to resist. I have come down here for assistance.

Carries His Life in His Hands. "I am carrying my life in my hands, for these ruffians are following me around with deep-set revenge in their hearts, and they are men who will stop at nothing."

Mr. McEae gave a thrilling account of the tragedy, in which he played a prominent part, and knowing the straightforward character and veracity of the police officer, the reporter gratefully that the shooting was necessary. At any rate, it rid the country of a desperado out of existence.

A BARRAGE OF DARING ROBBERIES. Peterboro Police Looking in Vain for the Täter. Peterboro, Oct. 10.—One of the boldest of the series of thefts which have been committed in this vicinity and which were perpetrated Tuesday night in the office of the Midland Roller-Mills at Auburn, has not yet been solved. The robbery took place on a rainy night, and in consequence a gang of men were at the scene.

The robbery took place while the men were actually packing directly over the office it being situated in the storehouse. The electric lights in the office were turned out while the watchman was on duty, and he returned to the office with the safe and found the interior rifled of over $150 in cash.

The whole job was done so neatly and with such rapidity that it is difficult to believe that the thief was committed by someone well acquainted with the premises and with the habits of the watchman, or else the watchman was one well skilled in the business he had in hand.

The police are endeavoring to ascertain the facts of the affair as far as are known, and have taken the case in hand.
