Poetry. The Fellow That Means What He Says There is one whom you ever may trust,
As you travel o'er life's varied ways,
Who will strive to be honest and just—
He's the fellow who means what he says.

He is not one to lead you astray; On his word you may always depend; When he owes he is sure to repay, And he never goes back on a friend. What he scorns to the last is a lie;
What he holds to his heart is the truth;
All temptation he well may defy
Who will keep to this rule in his youth.

To be true all is there to be true! You will find in the end that it pays; Search your heart, and be certain that you Are the fellow who means what he says.

The Arrest of Slider.

Billy Haven was no ordinary burglar. fis theory was that if a man wished to to use his brain rather than his muscle. It was all right enough, when starting out to or a loaded club, or a pistol, but Billy claimed that the doing of this showed a lack of mental ingenuity. Any muscular fool can bludgeon the senses out of a half-awakened householder aroused from his first deep sleep by the noisy entrance of a thief through the kitchen window, but bludgeoning Billy looked upon it as clumsy and unnecessary. While I stay with you my men must have a look over the premises. Do you wish me to read it to you?"

"It is not at all necessary," said Slider, in an agitated voice. "I have no doubt they are quite correct. As for searching, I have no power to prevent that; but before you begin. I would like to make a proposal. looked upon it as clumsy and unnecessary. attention to business, and the endeavor to please customers, soon began to build up for himself an enviable reputation among the police. They never caught sight of Billy or his pals, but they always recognized his handiwork by the neatness and dexterity of it. They did not even know his name, but good at tracking crimes of a kind whose was not visible. They said among themthe burglar, until the crimes were called come at once if you hear me call." a man intimately connected with numerous power in the city. Billy's investigations led him to the knowledge that Mr. Slider was a most careful man, who had arranged every electrical appliance then known for the discovery of a burglar. He appeared to realize that if once a burglar got entrance into 'he big house, the family would be, comparatively speaking, at his mercy; and so it was that every window was protected by half a dozen different devices. The doormats and windows were so arranged that after everybody went to bed the lightest footfall on any of them would light all the electric lamps in the house; would ring a large bell in the tower; would telegraph a warning to the nearest police station, and did exactly as he told him. They were in a perfect state of discipline and had the utmost confidence in Billy's ingenuity. The plan was this: They were to obtain entrance into the house about nine o'clock in the evening, in perfect legal form; the inspector was to arrest Mr. Slider, who might, of the safe, and they each contain £5,000."

They were to discipline and had the utmost opened. He took out several bags, and, taking down a pair of scales from the top of the safe, said: "You may weigh this, and it were cared to the safe, said: "You may weigh this, and they each contain £5,000."

The other two alleged policemen could then search the house under the protection of a bogus search warrant, and quietly secrete all the valuables and money that they could lay their hands on. The inspector then intended to tell Mr. Slider that because of his protests he would not take him to jail but that he must understand that he was under arcest, and that he might have to report to the head officer when called upon to do so. Billy's plans, when matured, were very simple. He obtained the costume of a pelice inspecter for himself and the clothes of an ordinary policeman for each of his four pals. He got likewise, a very good imitation of a warrant of arrest, made out in the name of Mr. Slider. Billy was the man of brains in the gang, and the other four realizing this did exactly as he told him. They were in a perfects tate of discipline and had the utmost confidence in Billy's ingenuity. The plan was this. They was the man of size of size of the size of th
