CORRESPONDENCE

Dear Mr. Tor:—

I have heard that the Outlook or an alleged correspondent is anxious to know if there had been an exhibit in Bridgetown this fall.

If the Outlook had done the work of the secretary from April to the present he would have fully realized that Bridgetown had held an exhibition, nor would he consider it the duty of the secretary to write out the prize list for publication. The books, which have been in almost daily use since the exhibition, are now at the disposal of either the Monitor or the Outlook, if they are anxious to work out and publish the prize list for their readers.

A Narrow Escape

One of the worst experiences in the history of American shipping occurred a few weeks ago on the Atlantic ocean, 20 miles N. E. of Cape Hatteras.

The American tern schooner Henry Weller, owned by the New York Lumber Co., and commanded by Capt. Wm. Burns, of Sandy Cove, Digby county, with a crew of nine men, was water logged and dismasted Oct. 5th during a severe gale of wind, on a voyage from Brunswick, Ga., for New York.

After the officers and men and a dog had been on the wreck five days without food and water, they were sighted by the British steamer Tiverton, bound from Mexico for Boston and were taken off with great difficulty on Oct. 10th, arriving at Boston two days later.

When the wreck was sighted the captain of the steamer asked for volunteers to man the life boat. To give an idea of the sea which was running at the time of this rescue, it took the life boat seven hours to return to the steamer from the wreck.

Then the boat was smashed to pieces when she struck the steamer, again throwing all hands in the water. The rescue was finally made with out loss of life, but not until the Tiverton had two boats completely destroyed.

Capt. Burns and his crew lost everything except the underclothes which they had on. The captain's set of nautical instruments and marine library were the best that money could obtain and its loss will be keenly felt. The dog was the property of one of the owners of the Weller and was forwarded to New York, evidently none the worse for its terrible marine experience.

Capt. Burns, who is at present in Marblehead, is suffering considerably from injuries received while on the wreck. His friends, however, wish him a speedy recovery.

Ladies of Culture and Refinement Use Salvia Hair Tonic, It Makes the Hair Beautiful.

At last a remedy has been discovered that will positively destroy the pest Dandruff!

That Dandruff is caused by germs is accepted by every sensible person. Dandruff is the root of all hair evils. SALVIA will kill the dandruff germs and remove dandruff in ten days, or money back.

The manufacturer guarantees it. It will grow hair, stop itching scalp, falling hair, and make the hair thick and abundant. It prevents hair from turning gray, and adds life and lustre.

SALVIA is a hair-dressing that has become the favorite with women of taste and culture, who know the social value of beautiful hair. A large generous bottle costs only 50 cents at leading druggists everywhere. The word "SALVIA" is on every bottle.

WHERE INDEED!

A public motor-car service had just been inaugurated between two quiet, old world country towns, and great interest was being shown by the townspeople in the working of the cars. One very dark night, as the motor engine was skirting out its weird noise, and the fearful odor of petrol suffused the air, the following conversation was heard between an old man and an old woman seated in one of the cars:—Old Woman—"They're awful things these motor-cars! They're no safe at all, Old Man—"No! They're always something goin' wrong wi' them." Old Woman—"Whither wud you rather be—in a collision or an explosion?" Old Man—"I would far rather be in a collision." Old Woman—"For why?" Old Man (thoughtfully): "Because in a collision there ye are; but in an explosion where are ye?"

ALL READ 'EM

Albert B. Kelley, an advertising expert of Philadelphia, sat in the Markham Club, turning the seventy or eighty pages—mostly advertising matter—of a weekly.

"Advertising is such an art," he said, "that many people actually buy periodicals as much for the advertisements as for the reading matter."

Mr. Kelley smiled.

"I sat in an editor's office the other day," he continued, "when a poet entered."

"Glad to see you've accepted that sonnet of mine," the poet said, feverishly pushing back his long hair. "I do hope it will be widely read."

"It's sure to be," said the editor. "It's sure to be. I've placed it next to one of our most striking ads."

MAKING A BASEBALL

The Winding Process is Done in Secret in a Locked Room.

In the center of the standard baseball, as used by the professional players, there is a globe of compressed cork covered with rubber. This globe is about an inch in diameter and around it are wound a few layers of coarse twine. It is then sent to the winding room, where machines first wind on thick four ply blue yarn. At frequent intervals the ball is soaked in a cement solution and put aside to dry.

Many different workers have to do with the winding of the ball. Each workman tests it for size and weight before he passes it along. The machines insure tight and even winding and there are different machines for different sizes of yarn. These machines are operated in secret in a locked room.

When the ball has been wound to the proper size with blue and white yarn and has been dipped in the solution, it is wound finally with smaller yarn. Thus the firm, rough center is overlaid with finer and finer material until at last it is smooth and perfect, ready for the cover.

The best horsehide obtainable is used for covers. The pieces are cut by hand and dampened and stretched. The ball is put into clamps and the cover sewed on with cotton thread, which has a greater frictional strength than linen or silk. Each ball is sewed by hand and then put into a machine that irons down the seams. The polishing is done by still another machine. Then, after being stamped and wrapped, the ball is ready for market.

A ball weighs five ounces and is nine inches in circumference. In the course of manufacture it is weighed and measured five times.—Harper's Weekly.

NEW YORK'S FIRST CHURCH

And the Earliest Religious Services on Manhattan Island.

The first religious services on Manhattan Island was held in 1623. This resulted in the organization of a church, the services of which were held in the upper story of a mill which ground the grain of the colonists. The first minister was Jonas Michellius and the first elder Peter Minuit, director general of New Netherland.

The first church building on Manhattan Island was situated on Pearl street, between Whitehall and Broad streets, facing the East river. This structure was a poor, plain building of wood and constructed in 1633 by the West India company. Its congregation was presided over by Dominie Bogardus, the second clergyman of New Amsterdam, and was regarded as a more fitting place than the loft of the mill for public worship.

William Kieft, director general of the West India company, caused to be erected a church outside of Fort Amsterdam, which contained three long, narrow windows on each side, fitted with small panes of glass set in lead, on which were burned the coats of arms of the chief parishioners. This building was erected in the meadow of Mrs. Dominie Dirinus and fronted on a lane, now called Exchange place. In those days, however, it was known as "Garden alley." A large bowl of solid silver for baptismal services was made by the silver workers in New Amsterdam. The bell which had been removed from the old church in the fort—Westchester County Magazine.

Mark Twain's Question.

Mark Twain when visiting Melbourne was the guest of the mayor on a picnic trip down the river Yarra, a stream renowned for its crookedness and for the odor from its banks. On account of the many turns in the river numerous signs reading "Dead End" are placed at the turns to warn ship captains to slacken speed, and these attracted Twain's attention. Sniffing cautiously at the tainted breeze that came from the slimy banks he turned to his host.

"Mr. Mayor," he asked, "what are these dead ends that smell so strong?"

Radium's Wonderful Power.

Suppose that the energy of a ton of radium could be utilized in thirty years, instead of being evolved at its invariable slow rate of 1,700 years for half disintegration, it would suffice to propel a ship of 15,000 tons, with engines of 15,000 horsepower, at the rate of fifteen knots an hour for thirty years—practically the lifetime of the ship. To do this actually requires 1,500,000 tons of coal.—Sir William Ramsay.

A Household Hint.

Young Wife (sobbing)—George treated me awful mean. He—He promised to give me a machine for my birthday, and it—it—came home today. Her Mother—Then what are you crying about? Young Wife—It's a—It's a washing machine.—Baltimore American.

Getting Square.

The Doctor—Hark! Whence those cries of agony? The Lawyer—They come from the office of the dentist. Last week the entrepreneur operated on the dentist, agreeing to take his bill out in trade, and now the dentist is taking it out.—Satire.

A Good Tonic.

Have you noticed what a tonic a good laugh is? The next time you are angry instead of frowning make yourself smile, then laugh. You'll feel better.
