

China, for the diffusion of Chinese thought and the popularization of Chinese philosophy. It was found necessary to form two sections, one for the Canadians and English-speaking Chinese and the other for the Chinese-speaking Chinese. There are eight lectures in each section throughout the academic year on cultural subjects, and a number of special and social meetings at which Chinese teas and dinners are served. In the Chinese section there are also lectures on the modern Chinese language. Over two hundred Canadians and one hundred and fifty Chinese have paid membership fees, a large number of them being regular attendants at the meetings of the Society. Resolutions have been passed to establish two scholarships at McGill, one for a Canadian student in the Chinese Department and the other for a Chinese student in the University, having regard in both cases to the academic achievements of the students and to his or her financial necessities. Extension classes, both cultural and linguistic, are scheduled for the first time this fall and the fact that, according to the University statistics for the past two years, Professor Kiang has had the largest number of outside lectures among the faculty staff shows the growth of public interest in the field of Chinese studies on this continent.
