There existed not a single plan of campaign, not a single skeleton order for mobilization, no plan for camps instruc-tion; in fact, not one of the preliminary necessities to meet a war crisis should it come. Mrs. Sternaman Will Face Another Jury.

When the Evidence Laid Before the Minister of Justice Will Be Gone Into.

Cayuga, Ont., Jan. 19.-The suspense over the Sternaman case, which yesterday had become almost painful, was last night relieved by a dispatch from the secretary of state at Ottawa er, The truth, of course, is that the stating that the minister of justice maintenance of the territorial integrity had granted the condemned woman a new trial. When the news was announced a loud cheer of satisfaction went up. The crowd rushed out into the streets, and the excitement became a furore. Revs. Foote and Edgar, who had been in constant attendance on the unfortunate woman since her incarceration, went to break the news. As they entered the jailer's office, directly under Mrs. Sternaman's cell, she recognized their voices, and it dawned upon her that some news was at hand. When they entered her cell, Mr. Foote said: "Well, how would you like a commuted sentence?" would like it," she replied. "How would a new trial suit you?" Mr Edgar asked. "That is what I want," was her reply. They congratulated her upon her escape from the jaws of death, and the poor woman was so overjoyed that she scarcely knew what

She said, "I heard Mr. Foote and Mr. Edgar enter the jail, and enter the room below me. They talked in very low tones for a short time. The moments seemed like hours to me, and the thought rushed through my head, am I to be hanged, or am I to have a new trial? They came up stairs in company with Mr. Murphy. British Views as to China.

Seizures by Russia and Germany and What They Mean.

It Would Be Commercial Suicide for Britain to Allow These Nations to Seize the Best Port of China.

As the London National Review is known to represent the views of an influential section of the Salisbury Cabinet, more than common interest attaches to its editor's comments on the seizure of Kiao Chau Bay by Germany. They are set forth in the January number under the caption "Episodes of the Month," but they are not free from ambiguity. On the one hand, an attempt is made to minimize the importance of the seizure, while, on the other, it is suggested that Japan has a right to protest against Germany's act. and it is further asserted that England could not afford to stand by and see China carved up by protectionist pow-ers whose policy would involve the closing of the Chinese market to British The Review's disposition to avert an international quarrel by making light of the Kiao Chau incident is indicated by its favorable reception of a letter addressed to the London Times by the Shanghai correspondent of that paper. The writer points out that the German demonstration occasioned no surprise among the mercantile community of Shanghai for the reason that "Germany has, for the last two years, been giving unmistakable signs of her intention to obtain a naval station somewhere on the China coast." He goes on to say that it would be better that she should establish herself in the north rather than on the coast of Fo-kien, and seems inclined to think that "such an arrangement might tend to a wholesome preservation of the balance of power." Kiao Chau, with its great expanse of land-locked water and neighboring coal mines, is described as an ideal naval station. The belief is also expressed that no better field could be chosen than Shang Tung in which to expound to the Chinese the benefits of good government and of the proper development of their country. To the question how the seizure of Kiao Chau Regulate the Bowels. Purely Vegetable is likely to affect Great Britain, the Shanghai correspondent, who, pre-sumably, represents local British feeling on the subject, replies: "While, from the purely British standpoint, it would probably be advisable that so strong a position as Kiao Chau should not be held by any one European power, but that the port should simply be added to the number of those already opened under treaty, there would not appear to be any special objection to its being occupied by Germany."

It is recognized, however, alike by the Shanghai correspondent and by the National Review, that the Japanese and, for that matter, the Chinese also, have a right to ask that Russia, which, in 1894, intervened to preserve the integrity of the Chinese Empire in the case of the Liao Tung Peninsula, can now permit logically the occupation of Kiao Chau in 1897 by any foreign powof the Chinese Empire was only a pretence for Russia's demand for a revision of the Shimonoseki treaty. The czar's advisers foresaw that if Japan acquired possession of Corea and that Liao Tung Peninsula there was an end to their hope of acquiring an ice-free seaport, whereas, if the treaty were revised, it would be easy to secure from China, in return for financial services, the right to occupy such a port in winter. As a matter of fact, the German seizure of Kiao Chau Bay was promptly followed by the announcement that the Russian fleet would be allowed by China to hibernate at Port Arthur. The time has gone by when Englishmen were willing publicly to protest against Russia's reasonable wish for an ice-free port on the Pacific; indeed, it is recognized by the National Review that "every power desires to have a naval base in the North China Seas, and, moreover, every power considers itself entitled to make its choice at its own convenience." Japan already has Wei Hai Wei in her possession, and is entitled by treaty to retain it until the war indemnity is paid fully. She may request that, even after the pay ment of the indemnity, she may be suffered to keep it on terms equivalent to those upon which Kiao Chau is leased to Germany. The Review acknowledges that Great Britain herself has long shared Germany's ambition for a suitable port on the seacoast of North China, and predicts that the German government will be as unruffled by England's occupation of a harbor in that quarter as the British government was by the Kiao Chau episode. In fine, the people of the two countries are advised "to take their cue from me." She spoke in very tender terms of Mrs. Chipman, her first husband's newspapers." While it is admitted that, for comher in all her trouble. Her eyes mercial and naval reasons, the right to occupy a harbor considerably porth of occupy a harbor considerably north of England has, however, immense commercial interests in the said: "If you leave this door open to-night I would not walk out. In 1895 the total foreign trade of China was valued at 314,989,926 taels; the haikwan, or customs tael, which her hair was neatly put up. She has changed very little since her trial two day worth about 81 cents in 1895, is today worth about 60 cents. To this total the commerce of Great Britain and British possessions contributed 213,521,-765 taels; that is to say, British subjects transacted 67 per cent of the whole foreign trade of the Celestial Empire. Again, the tonnage of the British shipping entered and cleared in Chinese ports in 1895 was 20,526,798 tons, while that of Germany, France, Russia, Denmark and the United States combined was only 3,224,271 tons, or less than one-sixth as much. We observe, lastly, that while in 1895 England had 4,084 residents in the treaty ports, the United States, which came next, had but 1,325; France, 875; Germany, 812, and Russia, 116. The data just quoted show that Great Britain could not permit, without committing a species of commercial suicide, the partition of the Chinese seacoast among European powers, which, should they follow their habitual colonial policy, would shut her out of the Chinese markets.
