THE BRITISH ELECTIONS

of the elections in the old country? Do you think the Liberais will be re-Do you think the Liberals will be let turned? These and many similar questions have been asked so often during the past weeks that I shall be heartly glad when the results are known, both glad when the results are known, both for the sake of peace and quietness in the old land and all interested here. I am not a prophet, neither am I the son of a prophet, but I do make bold to predict a victory for the Liberals, but by what majority neither I nor anyone living can say. Had I made a prediction about six or seven weeks ago I would have ventured to put the majority down to at least 150, independent of the Irish vote; to-day I do not think interesting, factor in the present crisis is the lords and the land question.

About three years since I had the pleasure of dining with three or four members of the present government.
Naturally enough our after-dinner conversation turned upon the political events of the day, and I asked one of vital question that the cabinet had un him by the premier himself withou starve to death at home.

EAST & CO., LIMITED 300 Yonge Street.

Editor World: What is your opinion of the Irish vote; to-day I do not think it will reach that number, with the Irish vote inclusive. Had it been a straight issue, "lords v. commons," "free trade" or "tariff reform," anyone knowing the feelings of the middle and working classes could easily predict a crushing defeat for both the lords and tariff reform. Unfortunately, it is a most difficult matter under the existing system of elections in England to get a clear and straight issue on any one or two points. And in this respect Canada is a long way ahead of the old country, and in saying this I respect Canada is a long way ahead of the old country, and in saying this I have two very important factors in mind: "Religion" and "temperance." Here you have the people working harmoniously together; on religious matters none of the bitter feelings of church and dissent, which is so pronounced in England and which is retarding religion and causing more infidelity than all other causes put together. Here you have the voice of tarding religion and causing more infidelity than all other causes put together. Here you have the voice of the people ruling the drink traffic to a great extent. Quite the reverse do we find it in the old country. There only too often we find the beer and the Bible go hand in hand; or, in other words, the parson and the orewer working together to the utter shame and disgrace of the former. Anyone living in Canada can form no idea of the dominating influence of the clergy in the rural districts of England and Wales. Occasionally a wealthy brewer will build a church or schools, just to appease his conscience, and he is looked upon as a heaven-born saint. Unfortunately, the power of the clergy is carried to the house of lords, and I believe that I am justified in saying that the recent utterances in that august assembly by the Archbishop of York and the Bishop of Hereford are the first on record for the past 100 years where the lords spiritually, either individually or collectively, have spoken in favor of any measure for the uplifting of the masses. Is it any wonder that with the growth of the Free Churches such animosity has been shown and the people cry Down with the house of lords? The Englishman boasts of his freedom and shouts for all he is worth "Britons never shall be slaves!" It's a mockery.

them what he considered the most der consideration after having been returned to power with the biggest majority ever known, purposely to car-ry out a big social program. He promptly replied, the land question—it must and shall be dealt with before the present government goes out of office; this was the one assurance given divulging any cabinet secrets, so that this clearly proves that whilst Lloyd-George was the one man to put it into shape, it is not altogether his land bill, as at that time he was president of the Local Government Board, of the Local Government Board, which office undoubtedly prepared him for the final plunge, and when this question is settled, which it is bound to be sooner or latter, one of the greatest obstacles to the unemployed will be removed. When we think of the mil-lions of acres lying idle in England alone, paying no share of taxation, and the millions of people crowded together ed to bring in a report as to the best grievance against government and so-means of remedying the trouble, the ciety. there any need to ask why the agri-cultural laborers have become almost extinct—they have been driven from the land because there is no accommomay be for 50 or 100 years, and are in most cases in a most dilapidated con-

I cuite but which is too delicate to touch upon agree that protection is essential to both countries, but the circumstances are totally different. Here in Canada should the Conservative party gains the conservative party and the conservative party and the conservative party and the conservative party safe. you have a vast country and what industries you have need protecting to a certain extent, there you have a small country with an immense population. With such an overpius of labor the day, the house of lords and the day, the house of lords and the day, the house of lords and the conservative party gain the day, the house of lords and the conservative party gain the day, the house of lords and the lords and the day, the house of lords and the lords are the lords and the lords are lords and the lords and the lords and the lords are lords and lords and the lords are lords and lords and lords are lord it will be impossible to get an increase Irish question and home rule will be it will be impossible to get an increase in wages, such as you get here. At the present time the cost of living in England, and when I speak of living I include all necessary requirements, is not much more than half of what it is in Canada. Supposing a man gets an increase of wages, say of 10 per cent., and all necessaries have a tariff of the coming election, as there are thou and all necessaries have a farill of 15 to 30 per cent put on, how much better off is that man going to be. Here you are bound to pay big wages because labor is scarce, there for every to prevent it being carried. vacancy there are at least 20 for it.
