BY THOMAS HOOD.

SPECIMEN OF A MALTHUSIAN.

BY THOMAS HOOD.

My dear do pull the buil,
And pull it well,
And send those moisy children all up stairs,
Now playing here like bears—
Yon George, and William, go into the grounds.
Charles, James, and Pola are there—and take your string,
Drive horses, or it kites, or any thire.
Your equite chough to play at har and hounds,—
You, little May, and Caroline, and I oil,
Take each your doil,
And go, ray dears, into the two-back pair,
Your sister Macraret's there—
Harriet and Genee, thank God, are both at school,
At fir of Ponty Pool—
I want to read, but really can't get on;
Let the four twins, Mark, Matthew, Luke, and John,
Go—to their nursery—go—I never can
Enjoy my Malthas among such a clan!
Oil, Mr. Malthus, I agree
In every thing I read with thee I
The world's too full, there is no doubt,
And wants a deal of thinning out.—
It's plain—as plain as Harnow's Steeple—
And I agree with some that for,
Who say the King's too popular,
That is,—he has too many people.
There are too many of all trades,
Too many bokers,
Too many bokers,
Too many werry-thing makers,
But not too many undertakers.—
Too many bokers,
Too many werry-thing makers,
But not too many undertakers.—
Too many bokers,
Too many werry-thing makers,
Sing petitions
Capital posishment to abolish;
And yet some Wrougheads,
Your netaphysicians!
Sing petitions
Capital posishment to abolish;
Sing petitions
Capital posishment to abolish;
With thick not long heads,
Poor netaphysicians!
Sing petitions
Capital posishment to abolish;
"On the cantrary,
red car's upon me books of indignation. I attended for husband, &c." "Ah! I unlerstand; you had the misfortune to despatch him." "On the cantrary, replied the doctor, "I saved him."—The Parrot.
