THE LAST WORD

German heavy artillery is pounding Antwerp, the last remaining stronghold of the Belgian army, while German armies to the west continue the decisive struggle with the French and British allies.

Beyond this little is known of today's developments in Belgium and France. Reports coming through London from the front are of yesterday's morning or earlier.

King Albert is variously reported as leading a part of the Belgian army out of the city with the intention of effecting a junction with the French and British forces. They report that the German guns already have done much damage in the city.

The most recent statement by the German war office was that the Germans had crossed the flooded Scheldt River, and continued to make progress.

The general situation in the west has undergone no change, says a French official statement at 3 o'clock this afternoon.

THE TURRET FORTS OF ANTWERP

The nature of the peculiar turret-backed forts that constitute an important feature of the defense of Antwerp is not generally understood, but they are explained in an interesting manner by Major Piotrowski, an expert representative of the Krupp, the great gunmakers of Germany, in an article specially written for the war.

Major Piotrowski, who is an expert in the art of warfare, is explained by this military expert in the special war magazine, "The War," of October 8 as follows:

It may happen that when fighting commences along a front of many miles, some troops may be more successful than others, and thus gain ground much in advance of the general line. This, if permitted to proceed to any great distance, would have the tendency to leave gaps in the line, and weak spots on the flanks of the successful troops, which would prove most dangerous to the general line, as well as to the advanced troops themselves. If confronted by a tenacious and aggressive opponent, the success of the campaign does not depend on isolated advantages of individual units, but on the successful advance of the entire line, the several units (divisions, army corps, or field armies) supporting each other in the forward movement, all under the general supervision of the commander-in-chief. Therefore, it may be said that the success of the campaign depends on the advance of the line until the frontiers of the trenches are reached, and the firing trenches facing the enemy's lines or the avenues of approach.

It would be well to note at this point that the firing trenches facing the enemy's lines or the avenues of approach, while still a factor in the general offensive movement, are not the primary factor in the offensive, and that is the only form of defense that can secure positive results.

Another whack at high cost of living.

Perhaps you were planning to buy your carpet, but you have changed your mind about it and decided that the cost of living isn't quite so high. But this won't be so bad after all if you invest in a little dye, which fortunately is not expensive and brightens up the faded floor coverings. To do this successfully you must first scrub the rug and then rinse it. Mix the dye and keep it well stirred in the vessel, so that the color will be even. While the rug is still wet, apply the dye with a clean white wash brush. It colors evenly this way. If the rug is dyed on the floor, place a great many newspapers under it to absorb the moisture. It should be allowed to dry on the floor. It will shrink slightly.

For a cotton rug which turns a dirty white use such colors as dark green, mahogany, red and soft blue. Dye rugs in this case should be applied to the dry rug.

If it is almost all wool, the color may be brightened or wholly restored if worked in a pail of water containing three parts of soda. If necessary to use fresh soda, procure it at the butcher, cut it into small pieces, soak for several hours. Dilute the liquid and wipe the carpet off with it. It makes a lather and should be rinsed off with clear water.

HOW GREAT ARMIES ADVANCE

The apparent inaction at some points on the great army lines in the European conflict, as reported in the daily dispatches, is apt to be confusing to the general citizen, but to the student of the art of warfare the reason for this is frequently clear, and is explained by a military expert in the special war magazine, "The War," of October 8 as follows:

It may happen that when fighting commences along a front of many miles, some troops may be more successful than others, and thus gain ground much in advance of the general line. This, if permitted to proceed to any great distance, would have the tendency to leave gaps in the line, and weak spots on the flanks of the successful troops, which would prove most dangerous to the general line, as well as to the advanced troops themselves. Colonel Jeffrey Hale Burland, who left Montreal on September 29 to look after the work of the Red Cross Society of Canada, in London, and at the front, died last night in London. The end came unexpectedly. So far the only word that has been received is that he died of angina pectoris.

MANY EAGER TO GO WITH SECOND CONTINGENT

Ottawa, Ont., Oct. 8.—Although the formal acceptance of Canada's offer of a second contingent has not been received, so many offers have been received already by the militia department from all over Canada from men who desire to fight that there is every indication that the contingent will be large. In keeping the size of the force down to the limit of 22,000.

The contingent will be by divisional districts and will be in charge of Col. R. W. Rutherford of Halifax, Col. J. A. Denison of Montreal, Col. P. D. R. Hemming of Kingston, Major General F. G. Leonard of Toronto, Col. W. E. Hodgins of London, Col. H. B. Cruikshank of St. John's, and Col. J. A. Denison of Calgary.

This method will result in the contingent ready much earlier. Equipment and supplies will be sent to the various mobilization headquarters and there is little doubt that before the end of the year the force will be ready to embark at Halifax for England.

CONSTABLE REPORTED

Constable George Blair has been reported by Policeman McLennan for standing at the corner of Charlotte and North Market streets and not moving when questioned to do so.

Constable Blair says that he saw the policeman approach and he was standing in the street, not even on the sidewalk, and could hold a gun. He says he was asked to move and he refused to do so. He was then taken to the station and charged with obstructing the police.

The policeman asked his name and reported him, he says, instead of the other.

THE COUNTY VALUATORS.

The work of the board of valuers in the county has been completed, except for some office work, after three months of hard work. The members are now engaged in supplementing their field work with information for which they have to look to owners and agents in the city. This work is nearly finished and the way is about cleared for the start on the valuation within the city limits.

This will be commenced at the first of the week and will take at least a month, if not more, time than the outside work of the board, referring to the work of the board, which is limited entirely to the business arrangements of the valuers. Captain Grege, who is acting as the general deputy, and who will continue to handle the business arrangements of the valuers, says that the work of the board is limited entirely to the management of the horses.

How We Help The Retailer

Every time this newspaper prints the advertising of a standard article it is helping the retailer who handles that product. It is to the interest of retailers that a newspaper should increase its general advertising—because it stimulates business at their stores.

People like to see the goods they read about in the newspapers. If price and quality suits them they will buy.

Every sale means a customer and a profit to the retailer. Retailers help their home newspapers and help themselves when they push these goods.

It is co-operation profitable alike to the dealer, the manufacturer, the newspaper, and the consumer.
