The following lines, written for the "First Step," a paper read at the last examination of the Young Ladies' School in Harvey, are copied by permission, for a corner of the Watchman. In these days of Scatlet Fever and Diphtheria, the simple pictures will, I think, be found illustrative of sad passages in the history of many heart.

A little boy, a laughing, roguish, boy. With dimpled cheek and bright blue eye, And ways so frank and coy.

With pattering feet from sun to sun, With merry laugh and sly bo-peep, And heart brim-full of fun. A mother's heart wrapped in her boy,

Her youngest born, the dearest yet, A wild, unmeasured joy. A father's hope, no words expressed The deep, strong, tide within his breast,

By look contessed. A little crib, a pale, thin, form. A shadow grown through fever heat, So weak and worn.

With fitful moan and ceaseless plaint, With cruel pain and tearless cry, And sob despite restraint,

An Angel's voice, " Come child, with me. lorger pain, nor cry, nor moan, Shall weary thee."

A little grave, 'twas scarce three feet, 'Neath fresh green sod's there lav A child asleep.

A mournful group, tones sad and low, Long sighs, deep breathed, and heavy eyes, That bitter tears o'erflow.

A silent voice no warm embrace, An empty chair, no bounding step, No chubby face.

A broken toy, a little frock, A half-worn shoe, a faded cap, Sweet treasure stock. A babe in Heaven, O precious gift !

An angel babe, with crown and harp Near Christ to sit, With low sweet voice, to lure the heart

From earthly care, to find in Christ The "better part." An angel babe, with tiny hand,

To part the clouds that hide from view The " Better Land."

Anecdote of the Princess Royal.

The young mother, so much beloved both in her old home and in her new one, who is now rejoicing in the possession of children of her own, appears to have been, in her childish days, as found of a bit of mischief as the humblest of the millions of other "little girls" born under her mother's sway. A young woman, new respectably married.

who was formerly one of the housemaids at Windsor, and left Her Majesty's service to marry er present husband, preserves a lively remembrance of the various incidents of his stay at the castle, and of the pranks of the little people who are now growing up.

Among other incidents of her residence at Windsor, Mary well remembers how one mornng she was busy cleaning the grate in Prince Albert's study, the bars of which she was in the act of blacking, when the door opened, and in tripped the Princess Royal and Princess Alice, in white morning frocks, their hair very smooth and nice, their hands very clean just ready for their morning lessons. Mary happened to be rather late that day, and was brushing away at the grate with might and main, being rather fea ful lest the Prince should make his appearance before she had done.

"Oh, Mary, Mary," cried the two children. coming up to her, "what are you doing?"
"I'm blacking the grate," replied Mary, and I'm in a great hurry, for I'm afraid the Prince will be coming before I've done.

" Oh, Mary, now, there's a good Mary, let us help you brush the grate," cried the two children, stooping down, one on each side of her, and trying to get hold of the brushes. Give us the brushes, Mary, and the lead, and out of the room in the greatest possible state of delight, leaving the poor housemaid beside her-self with terror, as the Queen who is a very early riser, might very probably meet her if she left the room, and what would her Majesty say at the sight of such a blackamoor?

While the poor girl, in her fright, was hesitating whether to go or stay, afraid of coming upon the Queen if she left the study, and equally afraid of seeing Prince Albert enter it if she remained, the two children ran off as fast as they could towards the schoolroom, tittering with exul tation at the thought of their escapade, when they suddenly met their governess, Miss H-d, who stopped them, and asked them what they wer doing in that particular passage at that hohr? We are going to the schoolroom !" answered

"Why what are the children doing here?"

"That, your Majesty." replied Miss H—d, "is the I saw my friend rat at the on your hands?" she continued, pursuing her two, but we're thinking that maybe it'd "and I insist upon your showing me at once the creature has a look uv me; but here's little where you have come from." As ber children Biddy, she's purtyer far, an' av you plase, sir, mamma is not to be triffed with, they immediates

'Certainly; whenever you like?' said I. mamma is not to be trifled with, they immediatedly led the way to the study, though very relucpoor housemaid herself, who heard what was with her, leaving little Biddy, who remained going on, but could not escape, there being no with us all right; but lo! the moment we en vancing, where one glance at the black face of and this time he had the youngest, a baby, in his poor Mary, who was crying as she stood there, arms, trying to rub the lead off her face with her apronrevealed to the Queen the nature of the prank in which the little truants had been engaged.

the Queen, kindly, to the frighted servant, "You Norah, because she has a look ov me, an' be me are not to blame because the Princesses have soul, I can't part with Biddy, because she's the done wrong. You are two very naughty girls," model of her mother; but there's little Paudet n, the added, turning to the c'aldren, as the housemaid left the room; "you have spoiled Mary's clothes, and you will therefore give her a new any trouble to any one; for av he takes after gown, and cap and collar, which you will pay his mother he'll have the brightest eyes, and av for out of your own money. And as you have he takes after his father, he'll have a fine broad for out of your own money. And as you have behaved very ill and very rudely to the poor girl pair of shoulders to push his way through the in blacking her face, you will both of you beg world. Will you swap, again, sir?"

her pardon for what you have done," The children's footman was accordingly des- same to me; and little Paudeen was left with patched forthwith into the town with instruce metions to purchase a new gown, cap and collar for Mary; and as soon as these were brought big, laughing eyes, 'so the affair is settled at up to the schoolroom the two little princesses last," were sent by the Queen to carry them to her, and to ask her pardon for the trick they had played elapsed, when Pat rushed into the cabin with

" Here, Mary," they cried, as they presented said : her with the things, "here is a new cap for you, 'It's no use; I've been talking to Mary, an' and a collar and a dress, and mamma says there we can't do it. Look at him, sir; he's the is quite enough for flounces. And we beg your pardon for putting the blacking on your face this wouldn't keep him from us. You see, sir, Norah

And back they ran again to the schoolroom, declaring that "they did not in the least mind eye, an' my nose, an' a little of both of uz all giving Mary the new cap, and collar and dress, overy No, sir; we can bear hard fortune, starv but they did not like to beg her pardon."
