TRIED BOGUS CHECKS BUT THE PLAN FAILED.

This Man Was a Nova Scotian and Very Well Connected.

He Had Some Funds in Bank But Drew Too Many Checks and Two Out of Three People on Whom He Passed Them Have Not Yet Secured Their Cash.

Nathan Allan and George Rubins, who have become suddenly notorious during the past few days, are not the only ones who have been passing about bad checks for fair amounts of money. This time it comes to light that a young Nova Scotian has been getting in some time work. About six or seven weeks ago the young man in question came to the city with his wife in delicate health, and they secured rooms at a Dorchester street boarding house. Everything went along smoothly, and the landlady was paid regularly until about three weeks ago she was paid the board money with a check on the Royal Bank of Canada. When an attempt was made to cash the check it was found that the check was not worth the paper on which it was written. The landlady of the boarding house was seen last evening by a reporter, and while admitting that she had been given the check said she expected to get the money some day. She refused to tell just how much the check was made out for, but it was learned from other sources that the amount was in the vicinity of $20. It will be three weeks to-day since the young man and his wife left the city.

Another place where the young man worked the check business with success, results was with a Charlotte street firm. At this store there was an account of about $10 owing, and the day that the young man presented a check for the amount on a Royal Bank of Canada form. A telegram was sent to the bank in the Nova Scotia town and word came back that there were no funds deposited there by the man in question.

A grocer, also doing business on Charlotte street, was more fortunate than the others, he was given a check for $10 and he had not yet cashed it.
