Nevertheless, before the invention of cast steel there was nothing better. In 1770, there lived at Attercliffe, near Sheffield, a watchmaker named Hunts-man. He became dissatisfied with the watch springs in use and set himself to the watch springs in use, and set himself to the supplying outward bound vessels with task of making them homogenous. Scanning the wayfarer closely, and moved by motives of humanity, the foreman granted his request and let him in. Feigning to be worn out with cold and fatigue, the poor fellow sank upon the floor, and soon appeared to be asleep. That, however, was far from his istention. He closed his eyes apparently only. He saw workmen cut bars of steel into bits, place them in crucibles, and thrust the crucibles into a furnace. The fire was melted. Olothed is wet rags to protect themselves from the heat, the workmen drew out the glowing crucibles and poured their liquid contents into a thing more to disclose.
