Liberal dilemma

In this interview, though Mr. Pearson was very knowledgeable, he did not exhibit the magnetism associated with most great political leaders. In his speech at Con Hall he was clear and concise—obviously well informed. Though tired, he appeared sincere and exhibited flashes of warmth and charm. Though a good speaker, he lacked the vigor of a great speaker.

Mr. Pearson has proven himself an extremely able administrator and diplomat in the external affairs department and the UN, but as a political leader his abilities are as yet unproven. I doubt whether he will be able to match the prairie politicians Diefenbaker and Douglas.

Premier Douglas is probably the best platform speaker in Canada while Diefenbaker has proven himself by leading his party to the greatest political victory in Canadian history.

Pearson is a great man but not an impressive one—a statesman, but out of place in Canadian politics.

War psychosis

Surely, as Mr. Pearson brought out in his speech, it is more important to survive than to surrender. He said that we must strive for peace, that the road will be long and tedious.

"We must have patience," he emphasized, "there is no simple solution."

But must we complicate matters by making people more conscious of war? Must we scare the nation with radiation death threats? Would it not be better to reassure people and yet make them aware of the dangers at the same time?

Throughout the interview, even though he was quite tired, Mr. Pearson exuded the confidence and affability of an experienced diplomat. He seemed to be confident of a successful finish to the present Berlin and nuclear crises—a valid opinion indeed from a Nobel Prize winner and successful foreign minister.

Train for a Career With a Future

Here are four interesting and rewarding plans for young men interested in a career as a commissioned officer in the Canadian Army:

SUBSIDIZATION FOR PROFESSIONAL TRAINING—There are tri-Service plans wherein university students in medicine or dentistry can be subsidized during their course and become commissioned Doctors or Dentists in the Canadian Armed Forces.

THE REGULAR OFFICER TRAINING PLAN—This is a tri-Service Plan wherein high school graduates receive advanced education and leadership training at one of the Canadian Service Colleges or a university to become officers in the Royal Canadian Navy, the Canadian Army or the Royal Canadian Air Force.

THE CANADIAN OFFICERS' TRAINING CORPS—University undergraduates may obtain a commission by training during their spare time and summer holidays. The student who trains under this plan is paid for his actual training time and is not obligated for full-time service after graduation.

THE OFFICER CANDIDATE PROGRAMME—Selected high school graduates, not wishing to undergo academic training for a degree, may qualify as a short service officer after a brief intensive period of military training and later may apply to become a regular officer.

You may obtain full information on any of these plans from your University Army Resident Staff Officer.
