THE USURPER

A tear rolled down Audrey's checks, and fell upon her tightly clasped hand, but she did not speak, though she knew that she ought to stop him. But there is no music under heaven—not the thrill of the nightingale, the clear note of the thrush, the curlew's song on some moonlit river—so sweet to a woman's car as the voice of the man she loves pleading for that love; and Audrey could not bid it cease.

the voice of the man she loves pleading for that love; and Audrey could not bid it cease.

"Sometimes," he went on, "I have torsured myself fancying that you had forgotten, or that some other better man had won your love, and that I should come back and find you were his wife. My heart leaped when I heard Sylvia call you by the name I have whispered to myself in the silent night, and I knew that you were still Audrey Hope."

A tremor seized Audrey and she tried to stop him, but she could not speak.

"It was Sylvia who told me that I ought to come back to the woman I loved and tell her that I loved her, and that I ought to ask her to—to try and loved and tell her that I loved her, and that I ought to ask her to—to try and love me in return. Did I do right, Audrey? Is there any hope for me, or ought I to have stayed away and ceased to trouble you?"

Her hands untwined, and he seized the opportunity to take the one nearest to him. It was burning hot.
"Tell me, Audrey," he said in a low voice. "Whatever the verdict is, I will try to bear it. If—if what I want cannot be, I will go away and trouble you no more. Audrey, will you be my wife?"

She turned her face from him that he She turned her face from him that he might not see the awful longing in it, the longing to throw her arms around his neck, hide herself in his strong arms, and give him love for love. Perhaps, with a lover's intuition, he read her heart, for he put out his arms toward her; but with a low ery that was half sob, half moan, she shrank from him and "No, no!" broke from her trembling lips.

He was silent for a moment, gnawing his moustache, then he glanced at her and saw the tears rolling down her face—the face which he had loved to picture as bright and happy—and his heart smote him. He called himself a brute to worry this radiant, beautiful creature who was born to wear a smile and go through the world as sorrowless as some who was born to wear a smile and go through the world as sorrowless as some tropical bird.

"Don't cry, Audrey," he said, gently, "It does not matter. I shall get over it! Better fellows than I am have had it! Better fellows than I am have had to bear this kind of thing, and I am not going to make you miserable by hanging about you with a handkerchief to my eyes. I will accept my dismissal at last. I—I think I'll take myself off now. Tell Sylvia—I've got to hear how you and she became such friends, by the way—tell her I'll come and hear her sing some other night, and—and good-by, Audrey. I hope you'll be happy whoever you marry.'

to be her husband! Jor-the husband of his beautiful ey! The woman whom so dan, the husband of his beautiful Audrey! The woman whom so many good men and true loved her! The thought nearly drove him mad. He knew—felt—that the man was a villain, just as Neville and several others felt it. And this smooth, subtle Sir Jordan was to wed his Audrey! He could not speak; his handsome face grew black, his eyes glowered down upon her as she shrank in all the splendor of her evening dress, and his tall form seemed to dilate and tower over her like that of some indignant and outraged god.

"Jordan Lynne!" he said. "Jordan Lynne! It is not possible."

He waited as if he expected her to tell him that he had misunderstood her; then he drew a long breath and looked round for his hat, caught it up, and, all unconsciously, crushing it in his mands, said:

said:
"I take that back! I can't wish you happiness; it would be useless! Jordan Lynne! You are going to marry him!" and dashed from the room.
Sylvia was just coming in, and he ran against her and sent her slight form spinning against the wall; then he seized her by the arm and, instead of apologizing, cried, in a low but terrible voice: "Good-by, Sylvia: I'm going."

Good-by, Sylvia; I'm going."
'Going! Where?" gasped Sylvia, inking he had taken leave of his senses, and not knowing whether to laugh or be frightened at his darkly furaugh or be frightened at his darkly furious face.

"Where?" he said, hoarsely. "To the devil! Good-by. For God's sake, save ser, if you can," and, wringing Sylvia's land, he dashed down the stairs.

Sylvia stood staring after him for a noment, then she went into the room and found Audrey lying upon the couch with her face buried in the cushion. "Oh, what has happened?" she exclaimed. "What have you said or done to nim? I never saw him like that belore!"

"I've only bro—bro—ken his heart," wailed Audrey.
"Only!" said Sylvia. "How have you lone that?"

"Oh, can't you guess? It was for me that—that Lord Lorrimore had been that—that Lord Lorrimore had been wandering all over the earth."

"I thought it was for a man called Neville Lynne," said Sylvia, without any intention of being witty.
She was a little confused and bewildered.

intention of being witty.

She was a little confused and bewildered.

"So it was," said Audrey, "but it was I who sent him."
"Oh!" exclaimed Sylvia, flushing, as she recalled all the hard things she had said of the unknown lady whom Lord Lorrimore loved, little thinking she was Audrey. "Oh, dear, then it was you? —I—I'm sorry I said what I did the other day, Audrey."

"You need not be; I deserved it all, and more," said Audrey, with a sob. "It was cruel and heartless, but I did it all in a moment, almost without meaning it, and before I could stop him or take it back he had gone. Men are so—quick and—and sudden, especially this one."

"Yes," said Sylvia, in a low voice; "and it is well for us women sometimes that they are." And she thought of the way in which Lord Lorrimore had saved her from Lavarick. "But why are you so unhappy, dear? Is it because he has not found Neville Lynne?"

Audrey shook her head without raising it from the cushion.

"No, it is not that. I don't care what has become of him now—I don't mean that—" "I think I know what you mean. But "I think I know what you mean. But still I don't see why you should cry. "I think I know what you mean. But still I don't see why you should cry. Lord Lorrimore has come back—"

"It would have been better if he had never come back," she said. "I—I am engaged to Sir Jordan Lynne—" Syivia started.
"Oh, poor Lord Lorrimore!" she murmured, the tears gathering in her eyes.
"Lynne? Is he—"
"Neville's half brother," said Audrey.
"How strange! But, Audrey, dear," and she bent over her and smoothed her hair, "you must not be so wretched.

and she bent over her and smoothed her hair, "you must not be so wretched. You can't help loving one man instead of the other. It is not your fault—"
Audrey shuddered at the word "love."
"Yes, it is," she said. "It is all my fault. I have been cruel and heartless, as you said, and now I am punished."
The servant came in to announce that the brougham was at the door.
"I must go," said Sylvia. "You won't come, will you?"
"Yes, I will," replied Audrey, drying her eyes. "I can cry at the back of the box just as well as anywhere else.

"Yes, I think so," said Sylvia, inaudibly, as she though of the moment when she saw Jack fall and that other when she saw Jack fall and that other when they brought her his coat and told her that he was dead.

As they drove on in silence she remembered the passionate words Lord Lorrimore had spoken as he rushed away just now. He had asked her to "save" Audrey if she could, but what was she to save her from Surely not from Sir Jordan Lynne, whom Audrey must be going to marry of her own free will and choice. A vague uneasiness fell upon her mind, and she would have liked to question Audrey, but she could not bring herself to inflict additional pain on the unhappy girl.

CHAPTER XXV.

Old Mrs. Parsons wept tears of joy when she was at last made to understand that the tall young man with the bronzed face was her "Master Neville," and welcomed him with a mixture of affection and respect that made poor Neville's heavy heart throb.

"Why lor', Master Neville," she exclamied after the first outburst. "It do seem as if it was only the other day

"Who is it?" he asked, in a voice ne tried to keep steady.

Audrey tried to lift her eyes to his, but it was as if a heavy weight hung on her lids.

"I—I am engaged to—to Jordan Lynne," came in a whisper at last.

Lorrimore started, and a terrible change came over his face. His Spanish blood, what little there was of it, would have glowed if she had mentioned any other name, and his heart would have glowed if she had mentioned any other name, and his heart would have glowed if she had mentioned any other name, and his heart would have glowed if she had mentioned any other name, and his heart would have glowed if she had mentioned any other name, and his heart would have glowed if she had mentioned have glowed if she had mentioned have glowed in the heart would have glowed heart would have g

The old lady nodded after a moment's pondering.
"Whatever you say is to be shall be, Master Neville," she said, with the implicit obedience of an old servant. "I did have a nephew as went off to sea, but I'm afraid he's drowned. Oh, don't you be afraid, Master Neville; I can keep my lips shut, as Mr. Trale knows."
The tiny bedroom pp under the thatched roof was as clean as a new pin and as sweet as lavender, and Neville slept soundly for the first time for many a night.

BULLET IN HIS FOREHEAD.

The Body of Nicholas Pautler Found Near Galt.

Galt, Oct. 6.—The body of Nicholas Pautler, who had been missing for over a week, was found this afternoon at Moffatt's Flats, a short distance south of the town. The body was lying beside the river, with a bullet hole in the forehead. Although the gun has not yet been found, indications point to suicide. The deceased was well known in Galt, where he had resided for many years. No reason can be assigned for the suicide. An inquest will be held to-morrow.
