Ross's Werkly states that the Grand Jury made a presentment against the Deputy Sheriff for using undue force and violence towards Joseph Doucette and his aged mother. This is not strictly correct. The presentment, which is, we hear, not likely to be entertained by the Court, says nothing whatever about the "aged mother." It does not even state whether the undue force and violence were used by the Deputy Sheriff in arresting Doucette or after effecting it. The presentment is not only vague on this head, but is also singularly indefinite as to the time when the acts complained of were committed. It merely says "The Grand Jury, on their oaths, present James Curtis, Deputy Sheriff of Queen's County, for using undue force and claiment during the months of June, or July, or August last, towards Joseph Doucette."

By We understand that a Despatch was received by the last English Mail and the state of the Same and claiment during the months of June, or July, or their oaths, present Deputy Sheriff of Queen's County, for using undue force and claiment during the months of June, or July, or August last, towards Joseph Doucette."
