great many crusades of this kind without producing any permanent effect. Laws have been enacted to suppress the shops, but in vain, probably for the reason that the public fails to see any marked difference between the character of much off the board's business and that of the bucket-shops.

Bucket-shop gambling is bad enough, but it is less detrimental to the community than Board of Trade gambling. It does not interfere with the natural course of trade and place artificial prices on the necessaries of life. It does not do just enough real business to invite people who care for their reputations to gamble under cover. It does not ture bank officers into losing millions of other people's money, however it may tempt the smaller fry. Bucket-shop gambling is but a reflex of the semi-masked evil of the Boards of Trade upon which, in fact, it bases its existence.

Reports of prices bet upon in the boards become public property when they leave the board room, and the effort to keep leaver the pared room, and the effort to keep leaver the leaver to the product of the course of the pared room, and the effort to keep leaver the leaver from the product of the public property when they leave the leaver from the product of the pared room, and the effort to keep leaver the pared room, and the effort to keep leaver the come public property when they leave the board room, and the effort to keep telegraph companies from sending them to bucket shops that will pay for the service will doubtless fail. This is what the Chicago board is trying to do.
