COLONEI QUARITCH, T.C. By H. RIDER HAGGARD

Scrambling out of the hole, he presently returned with a long coil of stout rop. It belonged to some men who had been recently employed in tutting boughs off such of the oaks as needed attention.

"They undid the rope and let one end down to see how deep the pit was. When they felt that the end lay upon the floor they pulled it up. The depth of the local transport of the pit appeared to be about sixteen feet, or a triffe more.

Harold took the iron crow bar, and having made the rope fast to it, fixed the bar teross the mouth of the aperture. Then he footbled the rope, tied some knots in it and et it down into the pit preparatory colimbing down.

But George wi too quick for him. Forgetting his dourts as to the wisdom of roping about Dad Man's Mount at right, in the ardor of his burning curiosity, he took the dark lastern and holding it it, his teeth, passed his body through the hole in the masonry and cautiously slid down the rope.
