LONDON TEAM IS FAVORITE
FOR TONIGHT'S BIG GAME

Combination Work Should Prove More Effective on Big Ice Than Individual Work With Weight Behind—Big Crowd of Rooters Will Go Down to the Queen City.

The intermediate championship of the O. H. A. will be decided this evening in Toronto, and either London or Collingwood will wear the title tomorrow. No matter who wins there is not a bit of doubt that the game tonight will be one of the fastest and hardest fought that ever marked an intermediate championship final, and the defeat of one team will mean the triumph of the other.

The London and Collingwood teams are evenly matched, and yet are not evenly matched. They are as totally different in some respects as it is possible for hockey teams to be, and the deficiencies of one are counterbalanced by the deficiencies of the other.

Collingwood a Heavy Team. Collingwood is probably the heaviest team in the intermediate series, while London is undoubtedly one of the lightest. The average weight of the London team is 133 pounds, while the average weight of the Collingwood seven is estimated at 166. However, this big difference in weight is counteracted upon the difference in the style of play. London plays a combination game, while Collingwood plays the individual style of hockey. The superiority of combination play over individual work is measured by the difference in weights between the two teams. What London lacks in weight it makes up over Collingwood in team play. It was because of this fact that London was able to hold the Collingwood team down so well on Collingwood ice. It was combination that enabled London to swamp Collingwood in the last five minutes of play in the northern town after the Collingwood players had tired themselves out in trying to use their superior weight.

London Should Win on Big Ice. Tonight's game should be much the same as the one in Collingwood, in as far as the play is concerned. The Collingwood rink is nearly as large as the Toronto Arena, and London's combination should prove particularly effective. With a big crowd of rooters behind them, the London team should win out on the big ice.

The Toronto papers pick London to win on superior combination, and the Toronto fans will be pulling for the local boys. This will be a great advantage. With a crowd of three or four thousand behind them, pulling, the London players' chances of landing the title of intermediate champions are particularly bright.

No Quitters on the Team. The team has been working out faithfully on the Toronto ice, practices being held on Friday and Saturday. All the players are in splendid condition, and are ready to play the game of their lives. They all realize the great task before them, but there is not a quitter in the bunch, and the honors are just as good as won by London.

The players will not arrive back in this city until tomorrow noon, and if they win the championship it is likely a reception will be given them. It is said that arrangements are under way at present to give the boys a welcome should they be successful—the city will be theirs.

Thorpe Rawest
Ever—J. McGraw

Marlin, Texas, March 16.—Here is Manager McGraw's opinion of J. Thorpe, disqualified Olympic hero, after watching the Indian at work during the first two weeks of the training season:

"Thorpe knows little or nothing about baseball. He may learn it after long, patient coaching, but he is the rawest recruit I ever had. He will be carried along first because he is a drawing card, and second, because he will develop into a great ball player."

ROLLER HOCKEY PROVES
POPULAR IN AYLMER

Interesting Game Played There Last Week Between Two Town Teams.

[Special to The Advertiser.] Aylmer, March 15.—A hockey match was played at the roller rink last night between the Reds and the Blues of Aylmer, and proved to be an interesting and novel event.

The teams were quite evenly matched and the game was interesting from start to finish, resulting in a victory for the Reds by one goal, score 4 to 3.

This being the first game played in the rink, the lights were not arranged as well as they might be. However, before another game takes place the management will have the lights rearranged, and additional ones put in, which, from a spectator's point of view, will be decidedly better.

A white puck will in future be used, instead of a black one, which will also improve the game for the onlookers.

The fast St. Thomas seven are expected to play a game with the Reds here on Friday evening, March 28. The management would also like to hear from a London team, if there is one in the city.

CARL CASHION IS "THERE"
THIS YEAR, WATCH THE
WASHINGTON CLUB!BY BILLY EVANS,
Umpire of the American League.

If Carl Cashion delivers the goods this year, critics will begin to dope Washington for the American League pennant. Cashion is Clarke Griffith's biggest problem. In the big fellow Griffith has a pitcher with everything save control.

His physique is more massive, denoting ability to start heavy work. His delivery is just "funky" enough to make him all the more deceptive.

At one time base runners ran wild upon Cashion, but how he makes them hug the bags. Control is the one thing he must get to be a great pitcher, and it seems he should be able to acquire this essential.

Every club to be considered a pennant contender must have three pitchers working in good shape. Last year Walter Johnson, Bob Groom and Tom Hughes carried the burden of the Nationals. Cashion, when used, generally performed nobly, lack of control being his only blemish.

Every now and then Cashion would come across with a game in which he would have almost perfect control, and critics would begin to pick the team as a pennant winner, and perhaps in the next game Cashion would be as wild as a Texas Javelin.

But no matter how wild he might be, Cashion never failed to show a brand of pitching that was unimpaired when he managed to get the ball over the plate.

I recall a game he pitched last year, when Henry caught in a three-run inning and myself did more acrobatic stuff than the headline tumbler in a three-ring circus.

Cashion gave something like 11 bases on balls, yet he won his game. When the pinch came he could get the ball across.

CARL CASHION.

Any pitcher who can do this surely has something on the ball.

Tom Hughes is a veteran. He has had a great deal of trouble with his arm of late, but it would not be surprising if he came through with another good year this season. If he does, Griffith need not worry.

If the break goes against Hughes—if he fails to be a winner, then Cashion must show if he Nationals are to take a hand in the world's series.

If Cashion is right, keep your eye on the Nationals in 1913.

SCOTLAND WON AND LOST
IN BIG FOOTBALL FIXTURESDefeated Ireland in Dublin, But Lost Rugby Game to England.

London, March 15.—Two international matches were on today's football program. Scotland met Ireland in soccer in Dublin, while Scotland's Rugby champions faced England at Twickenham.

The Dublin game resulted in a Scottish victory by a 2 to 1 score. It was a keenly-contested fight, which Ireland deserved to win. The Irish forwards played brilliantly, continually attacking the Scottish goal, which McKnight endeavored only ten minutes from the start.

Scotland's defense never began to improve, and six minutes later, Reid, completely outwitting the Irish backs, gave Scotland a lead. Before the interval Bennett added another from a corner, and soon afterwards McKnight shot one for Ireland.

Fast play characterized the second half. The Irishmen made desperate attempts to equalize the score, but ill-luck, coupled with magnificent defensive work by Coleman, Walker and Brownlie, thwarted all their efforts.

By far the most important of today's games was the Rugby international between England and Scotland at Twickenham, which, after a splendid contest, resulted in a victory for the Rose by three points to nothing. Mr. L. G. Brown, of Oxford University, scored the winning try in the first half.

Enormous public interest centred in this fixture, the spectators including all classes of society from the Prince of Wales downward. England had to go outright for the win, for though a draw would have given them the Rugby championship, it would not have obtained the Calcutta Cup, neither would it have won the triple-crown distinction, which has been denied the mother country since 1892.

Billy Borland threatens to become the Sammy Smith of hockey.

At that, Bill is some singer. You ought to have heard him singing out the stations on the way home from Collingwood.

Probably Collingwood would agree to waive the championship if Billy Borland threatened to sing.

No, Albury, Jimmy Gramary's suggestion that the London team carry green sticks and play with a green puck against Collingwood Monday night, has not been officially adopted. Jimmy always sticks up for the Irish.

The fact that George Wardrop uses a baseball mitt on one hand during a game should be excuse enough for some ballplayers to use a hockey stick when going to bat.

Billy Borland has selected that inspiring solo, "Collingwood, Poor Collingwood," as his donation to the program of tonight's game.

This is Billy Borland's birthday. May he celebrate it by scoring a dozen goals against Collingwood tonight.

The Guelph baseball club has an outfield of Fryer, Wright and Dunn. Almost as hot a proposition as that Collingwood forward line.

Collingwood colors are orange and blue. And this is St. Patrick's Day. What kind of a chance have those northerners, anyway?

The Acadian Cowbell Symphony is coming in for some notoriety. The members will make themselves heard at Toronto tonight.
