COLLECTOR ROSS'S DISMISSAL. The dismissal of Collector Ross will be a warning to men in a similar position in all parts of the Dominion to keep within and body together. The Trades and Lathe line of their instructions. The discretion allowed to collectors of customs is necessarily exceedingly limited. They have the law for their guidance and it would never do te permit them to disregard it in any single interest. not to amend it or modify it in any particular. They may make mistakes with regard to its interpretation without much blame, but to ignore it altogether or to do what it forbids is wholly inexcusable. In the case of the Baboon there was, it appears, no room for a mistake. The law distinctly forbids the collector to allow any American fisherman who is not licensed under the modus vivendi to tranship fish in a Canadian port. There may be circumstances under which it is very hard on the fisherman to insist on a rigid enforcement of the law, but it is not for the collector to consider those circumstances. He may represent them to his superior ut that is the most he can do. He must after on which he transgressed was as of no condition it with the most capable citizens are made. The same family names as these despited and oppressed crofters have done their full share towards making Canada. If they knew anything of the Scotch High-tory of Carada. If they knew anything of the Scotch character they would have been convinced that these poor people, misorable as their present condition is, possible that it is no exaggeration to a system unlimited. We need only mention their names to convince any intelligent Canadian that there is in them the material out of which the most useful, the most capable citizens are made. The McDonalds, the McKenzies, the McLeans, the McLeans, the McLeans, the McLeans, the McLeans and very many others bearing the same family names as these despited that the same family names as these despited to transing out that is the most he can do. He must also do not the affair. He same family names as these despited to the full share towards making Canada what it is to-day. They and sharing the first the same family and sharing the full share towards making Canada what it is to-day. They are also condition is not to pay his rent. He same consequently evicted, and was afterwards employed in Dublin at the office of the land league. Fanagher testified that he had carried letters, some of which contained check gard it in any single instance. It is their business to carry out the law and about the nature of the Scotch High-The matter on which he transgressed was one of no ordinary importance. The privilege of transhipping fish is one of the subjects in dispute between the British and the American governments. The Americans claim this privilege as of right The British hold that the Americans have voluntarily renounced this privilege by the treaty of 1818. It was not for a Canadian collector of customs to give up the British contention and to embarrass his government by permitting American fishermen to tranship fish contrary to the Scotch Highlander half a chance and law and to the British interpretation of the treaty of 1818. The Canadian Government could not afford to overlook so flagrant an offence. If the Dominion authorities took no notice of Collector Ross's violation of the law and the regulations of the department, the American Government would soon interpret its indulgence to mean that it did not believe will do as well in every respect as his clansmen did fifty, eighty, or a hundred in its own construction of the treaty, and

It being a forbidden article, the Government is not supposed to know that it is produced within the Empire at all. It is therefore not taxed, and its products can undersell India opium, which is subject to very heavy taxation, both where it is raised and in China. Although such immense quantities of opium are raised in China, the quantity imported from India has not greatly diminished. The only effect which the cultivation of the poppy in China has on Indian opium is to lower its price.

DRAR SIR,—Knowing that you were in this city yesterday and anxious to meet me in a glove contest to a finish or for points, as stated to me by Prof. Foster this afternoon at the Royal Hotel, I wish to state that I am ready and willing to meet one way or the other, but points preferred, as the authorities won't allow any glove fighting in public. So out with your challenge.

CLEM AUSTIN,

Champion Light Weight of B. C. One would suppose that if a prohibitive law could be enforced anywhere, it would be in China. There the authority of the Emperor is, in theory at any rate, un-limited, yet with all his power over the lives as well as the property of his sub-jects, the Emperor of China has not been able to prevent the cultivation of the poppy within his dominions and, in the face of his prohibitory decrees, the consumption of opium has gone on increasing among his subjects at a most alarmin rate. In the fight between prohibit and appetite in China, prohibition has
