Two of the Alaska steamships, the Queer and the City of Topeka, got in yesterday from the North, the former, contrary to expectations, arriving first. She was returning from her first excursion trip of the season, and encountering good weather made the round trip in less than nine days. Nearly one half of her excursionists disembarked here, one Raymond and Whitcomb party of 62 members landing to go East. All were much delighted with their voyage North, the great ice fields being to most of them something new. The Queen arrived at 11 o'clock and proceeded to the Sound two hours later, having passed the City of Topeka on the way down off Queen Charlotte islands. The latter had been delayed in the North several days by having more than the usual number of calls to make. She brought a full general cargo, partly She brought a full general cargo, nearly all consigned to Sound cities, a shipment of different kinds of furs being the only freight landed here. Mr. Boscowitz, who made the round trip on the steamer, and who brought the furs down, was one of the few passengers landed here. Among those aboard were four prisoners, John Simmens, Adolph Meyers, Gardner and Monsbaur, who with one exception were being taken to San Quentin. Simmens is under sentence of six years' imprisonment for shooting Howard, a popular newspaper man of Alaska. The circumstances of the affair have already appeared in print, but it is said, since the trial of the case Simmens has won much of the sympathy of the Alaskan citizens.
