QUEEN'S AND THE ASSEMBLY.

another paper regarding the relations of Queen's College to the Presbyterian Church. As some of your reeders may not be aware of the contents of the letter to which Mr. MacLennan's communication purports to be a reply, I trust you will permit me briefly to summarize them.

Queen's College was an institution incorporated by royal charter as an university in connection with the Church of Scotland for the education of youth in the principles of the Christian religion. No religious test was required from any. of the students attending the college, but all the trustees and professors before entering on their duties were required to subscribe a formula declarative of their bellef in the doctrines of the confession of faith. With the Board of Trustees, who were all members of the Presbyterian Church and nominated by congregations by the short of the professors and officers of the university. The university was at that time essentially Presbyterian modifications were made in the constitution. Among other changes it was provided that the trustees should become a self-elective body, being, however, still required to be members of the church and to the union and so long as it retained it unaltered to the members of the church in the same deat charter the college was received into the union and sood in the same relation to the united church as that occupied by its towards the Church of Scotland. Whether this arrangement was a wise one or not may be a matter for question, but the institution was adopted as one of the seminaries of the church at the same and the constitution and so long as it retained it unaltered to the theorem to the union and sood in the same relation to the united church as that occupied by its constitution, and so long as it retained it unaltered to the church of Scotland. Whether this arrangement was a wise one or not imay be a matter for question, but the institution and so long as it retained it unaltered to the three provides the constitution and so long as it retained it unaltered to the control of

be trustees of the college. By sec. 3 of this act (52 Vic., 105) it is provided that "It shall not be necessary that any trustee elected by the University Council be a member of the Presbyterian Church in Canada, or that any trustee of the said college hereafter elected make or subscribe any religious declaration or formula whatever, before entering on his duty as such trustee."

The situation is therefore as follows: We or formula whatever, before entering on his duty as such trustee."

The situation is therefore as follows: We have an institution originally essentially who are not removable by the assembly and are not responsible to, it, who act indepen-dently of it, even in obtaining legislation to change their own constitution, who are not necessarily all Presbyterians and not one of dently of it, even in obtaining legislation to change their own constitution, who are not necessarily all Presbyterians and not one of whom is required as formerly to sign any religious declaration or formula. We have also a staff of professors, who, other than those in the theological faculty, may be of any or no religious belief and a council consisting of persons of various denominations, including even Roman Catholics.

All these changes in the constitution of the university may be for its advantage as a public seminary of learning, but the institution can no longer claim to be a Presbyterian University or look for support to the church. It is in fact an excrescence on the Presbyterian system in Canada.

The most serious aspect of this matter is, however, that with this body of self-electing trustees not now necessarily all Presbyterians, and of Presbyterians from whom no declaration of adherence to the standards of the church is required, lies the power of appointment of professors in theology.

One of two courses must be adopted. The present anomalous relations between Queen's College and the assembly must cease, or tho appointment and removal of the theological professors must be placed in the hands of the assembly.

I venture to say that all fair-minded per-professors must be placed in the hands of the assertibly.

I venture to say that all fair-minded persons who consider these facts dispassionately will assent to these propositions.

I shall not trouble your readers with any remarks, as to the unworthy insinuations of occult motives on my part in bringing this matter under the notice of the phurch, contained in Mr. Maclennan's letter, but shall refer to some of his replies to my letter. All he can attempt to say in regard to the subject of the appointment of theological professors is that it is not likely that any danger will result from appointments any danger will result from appointments being made by this board. I would reply that this matter ought not to rest in the hands of an irresponsible board, however constituted, and be left to any peradventure. but must be vested solely in the General Assembly. Other Presbyterian Colleges.

Board of Trustees of Queen's College with the Boards of Management of Knox, Mont real and Manitoba Colleges, and quotes from C. J. Taylor's book certain passages which are entirely irrelevant. There is not the slightest similarity between the cases of these boards and the board of Queen's College. The boards of the other colleges are appointed by the General Assembly and are responsible to it. They do not appoint the professors in these colleges, but the appointing power is vested in the assembly; a body which consists of elders only. On the other hand, as I have shown, the appointing power is vested in the assembly; a body which consists of elders only. On the other hand, as I have shown, the appointing power is college are not appointed by the assembly, are not responsible to it, and cannot be removed by it, are not all Presbyterians, and those who are such have not been required to declare their achieveness in the church standard. Yet with this body rests the power of appointment of some of our theological professors. I think that none except those who have permitted their judgments to be warped by attachment to a particular college could defend such a state of affairs.

If the authorities of Queen's College resist any attempt being made to rectify this abuse it appears to me that this in itself affords sufficient reason for very decided action being taken by the assembly.

In the year 1889 the trustees of Queen's College, who, it will be noticed, are not appointed by the assembly, or responsible to it, applied to the Dominion Parliament for another act still further amending their charles. This they did without consulting the assembly on the vital changes contemplated in their new act. No fault can be found within them for doing so, as they are found in their new act. A Radical Change.

The radical change introduced by the act is this: Power is given to the University Council, which, among others, consists of graduates and members of senate, who need not be Presbyterians, to appoint five of its members, who need not be Presbyterians, to be trustees of the college.
