

THE HUGUENOTS.

Certainly the Huguenots had not a thought of tolerating Catholicism, except under compulsion. As the Protestants Guizot tells us, when equally provoked, they were quite as ruthless in massacre as their Catholic countrymen...

ONLY MAD.

The Oskalooso (Kan.) Independent recently reported a former citizen, Dr. W. H. Ridgeway, as dead at Topeka, whereupon the dead man wrote and said: "I went home and told my wife I was dead, and produced the copy of your paper in proof..."

TEN MILES FOR A CENT.

The Russian government has decided upon the introduction of specially cheap fares upon the Trans-Siberian railway, in order to encourage emigration to the country.

WARMING THE BED.

There was a register in the children's room, but it was only opened for an hour or two before bedtime. Dot and May made ready for bed in mamma's room, keeping very still so as not to wake the baby.

THE BOY EXPLAINED.

Here is a story told at the recent prize-giving at the Birkbeck Institution, London. A small boy, who had been instructed in the theory of the barometer, and in the results which follow from "nature's abhorrence of a vacuum," was asked in an examination paper to explain why, in baking, the juice in a fruit tart always runs up into the inverted cup which cooks generally place in the centre of the pie dish.

MISS HENDERSON, Stenographer.

The young stenographer was walking rapidly along the street. When she came to the tall building containing the offices of the News Bureau she paused and looked at her watch. She was twenty minutes ahead of time. The day before she would have hurried in and rushed feverishly to work, trying to retrieve some of the errors of the previous day's work...

when she owns so patiently that she cannot make out her notes. To tell the truth, I believe she isn't well. "I'm awfully sorry," said the manager, "but the work has to be done. Look at that, please."

"Terrible, isn't it?" queried the manager. "I was thinking of my own mistakes," said Miss Laurence. "I once put down that man in the railroad street business instead of in the real estate business."

"You did?" said the manager. "My mistake made itself known to me in the middle of the night," continued Miss Laurence. "It made hot all over. Oh, indeed, if Miss Henderson is as miserable as I was during my week of trial I don't blame her for any of her mistakes. I know what it is to blunder over and over; I know what it is to use the paper with the wrong heading."

"You do?" repeated the manager, in a surprised and amused voice. Then he went on: "I wasn't kind about the paper, but I did want to get that letter off." Then he said, musingly: "It wasn't altogether an easy job beginning work in a newspaper office, either, Miss Laurence. I declare, if Miss Henderson feels half as miserable as I did during my week of trial, I don't blame her for any mistake she's made."

"You will keep her for another week, then?" asked Miss Laurence. "I'll remain an hour late in the afternoons and go over the worst of the articles. I fully believe that the new stenographer is made of the right stuff, and will show out all right in the end."

"I hope so," said the manager, "for I am pleased with both her manner and appearance. I'll remain that extra hour, too, and we'll manage to keep along. I don't know that Miss Henderson has said anything as out of the way as that railroad street business." He laughed cheerily. Miss Laurence joining in, and during the laugh Miss Henderson, stenographer, entered the back office and lifted the cover from her machine.

It was truly wonderful, so said the manager of the News Bureau and his Literary Assistant, but on the last day of her week of trial Emily Henderson turned out the most beautiful and correct of copies.

"If this lasts we won't have to remain for the extra hour," said the manager, showing the neat pages to Miss Laurence.

"I believe it is a miracle!" cried the Literary Assistant. "It must be something of the kind," agreed the manager.

Miss Henderson, stenographer, continued to turn out excellent copy, and the labors of the manager and Literary Assistant were visibly lightened. But when, at the termination of the second week, the manager congratulated the girl upon her proficiency, and congratulated himself heartily for having obtained her valuable services, and when the Literary Assistant said with her hand on Emily's shoulder, that she was so very, very glad, then the young stenographer, in a wave of gratitude and emotion, solved the problem of the miracle by explaining how she had helplessly and hopelessly listened outside the office door.—Louise R. Baker in the Independent.
