REQUESTS FROM THIRD PARTIES FOR DATA FROM STATISTICS CANADA

Question No. 2,719-Mr. Beatty:

Since March 1, 1980, did (a) Statistics Canada (b) the Department of National Revenue receive requests from third parties (i) within (ii) outside the Government for personally identifiable information about individuals which was collected from those individuals under the threat of penalties for failure to disclose the information to the Government and, in each case, what was the response of Statistics Canada or the Department of National Revenue?

Mr. David Smith (Parliamentary Secretary to President of the Privy Council): I am informed by the Department of National Revenue and Statistics Canada as follows:

(a) Since March 1, 1980, Statistics Canada has received requests from third parties both from within and outside the Government for personally identifiable information.

The disclosure of identifiable information about individuals collected under the Statistics Act is forbidden by the Act except when such disclosure is explicitly consented to by the individual in question. For example, individuals request that their census records be disclosed to pension authorities for proof-of-age purposes. Some 13,000 requests of this nature are serviced by Statistics Canada each year.

(b) Since March 1, 1980, the Department of National Revenue has received requests from third parties, within and outside the Government, for personally identifiable information about individuals as extracted from income tax returns. While no record is kept of all requests received, the Department accedes when the requester has a legal entitlement to such information under subsection 241 (4) of the Income Tax Act. ALLOWANCE PAYMENTS TO OFF RESERVE STUDENTS

Question No. 3,735—Mr. Althouse:

1. Did the Department of Indian Affairs order a cutback of student allowance payments on January 1, 1982 to off-reserve Indian students and, if so, prior to that date, by province, what amount was expended on the program?

 $\mathbf{2}.$ By province, how many Indian students are attending school off reserve as opposed to on reserve?

Hon. John C. Munro (Minister of Indian Affairs and Northern Development): 1. Under the 1971 revision of the Department's Educational Assistance policy Indian students attending provincial or private high schools are provided with educational allowances to cover miscellaneous and personal supplies and to enable students to take part in community affairs and social activities. The rates are $10 monthly for students aged between 14 and 17 inclusive in grades 9 and over and $20 monthly for students aged 18 and over. The student allowance was being paid to registered Indian students in grade nine and above, irrespective of place of residence.

Following legal advice that the Department's authority under the Indian Act did not extend to providing educational services to elementary and secondary students normally resident off reserve, regions of the Department took steps to phase out programs of educational assistance to off-reserve students. Since 1980-81 was a transitional year, disparities between
