SIX THOUSAND DOLLAR FIRE ON DUCHESS ST.

Damage to the extent of $6000 to the contents and $1500 to the building was done by fire which broke out in the factory occupied by Wilson Warden, bottlers' supplies, 58 Duchess street, yesterday afternoon. The blaze was due to a pot of wax boiling over and setting fire to the surrounding woodwork. The third floor of the building was gutted.

When the firemen arrived the rear of the third floor was ablaze and smoke and flames were issuing through the windows. Five lines of hose were quickly got into commission and the fire confined to the third floor. Turpaulins laid on the contents of the lower floors saved them from damage by water.

STREET FIGHTS IN DUBLIN CITY

Ireland's Capital Not Yet Cleared of Rebels, States Premier Asquith.

TROUBLE HAS SPREAD

General Maxwell Will Command Loyal Forces Against Revolvers.

their detestation of the rising and, as a consequence Premier Asquith said he did not think it necessary to hold a session of the house Monday, as had been suggested by one of the members. It is clear to the world what true amount of support was behind the movement.

At the rising of the house, the home secretary, Herbert Asquith, was able to announce the receipt of information that over "considerable districts" of Ireland calm prevailed, and to repeat the prime minister's promise that, consistent with the military exigencies, all the news available would be published and the necessary facilities granted to newspaper men.

Correspondents to Go. On a motion for adjournment Home Secretary Samuel, replying to a question, announced that arrangements had been made for newspaper correspondents to go to Ireland and watch the course of events. Only such information as might be of disadvantage to the allied cause would be censored, he said.

The only information received from Ireland today, added the home secretary, was that over considerable districts matters had been quiet. Nothing, however, had been received from the disturbed districts, he said. Full reports of the course of events would be communicated to the public, he promised, between now and the next meeting of the house on Tuesday.

Individuals the ministers express confidence that the military forces on the spot can deal successfully with the movement. On the political side, the position is much more satisfactory. Mr. Redmond and Sir Edward Carson being in agreement that no political capital is to be made out of the trouble.

Enquiry to Be Searching. Premier Asquith's promise in behalf of the government of a searching investigation into the origin of the movement, and his acceptance of full responsibility, together with the speeches of the Irish Nationalist and Unionist leaders, expressing their desire to do everything in their power to assist the government, went far to allay the rising passions of the house, which had been shown in demands for the resignation of Augustus Burrell, chief secretary for Ireland, Baron Wimborne, the lord lieutenant, and other officials alleged to be responsible in disregarding warnings as to what was likely to happen from the Sinn Fein agitation. Sir Edward Carson offered to place his Ulster volunteers at the disposal of the government to help in suppressing the rebellion.

That a hopeful feeling prevailed in parliament was seen in a vote that no opposition was raised to the adjournment of the house to Tuesday, after the ministers had promised that this would not interfere with the issuance of any available news.

Dublin is further from London to the west coast of Ireland that the general public is concerned. No Irish newspapers have reached as far as the rising, and passenger traffic has been for the most part suspended. The only information comes thru official channels.

England naturally is extremely anxious about the Irish situation, but no fears are expressed that the government will not be able to suppress the rising. The casualties thus far do not exceed what might have occurred in civil riots, but more severe fighting is likely to follow before quiet is restored in Dublin.

The extent of the seditious movement is for the present a governmental secret, except that it has spread to the west and south. It was on the west coast of Ireland that Sir Roger Casement's expedition, consisting of a submarine and a steamer, was intended to land munitions when the steamer was captured by a patrol boat.

In the north of Ireland, so far as is known, there has been no disturbance, a direct despatch from London-derry reporting complete order.

From Sydney, Melbourne, Adelaide and other parts of the empire came a flood of cablegrams to Mr. Redmond today, repudiating the action of the rebellious elements in Dublin, and expressing scorn at what they have done "while brave Irish soldiers are dying at the front that their country might prosper."

Incidentally the messages express the fullest confidence in Mr. Redmond and the Irish parliamentarian party. Some of them were given out for publication by the Nationalist leader. One from Sydney, signed "MacCarthy," reads: "The sectional pro-German plotting disgraces home rulers here. Take heart. Our race is with you and our gallant countrymen at the front."

From Melbourne came a message signed "O'Connell," reading: "The Irish in Victoria view with abhorrence the futile and meaningless rebellion at Dublin, and sympathize with the national party in the cruel struggle against the criminal efforts of an insignificant minority to thwart the noble object of peace and reconciliation which was almost accomplished, such fanatics betray gross ingratitude for the benefits Ireland has received thru long agitation and the generosity of the Irish abroad, as well as the valuable help rendered by the British and other democracies. Brave Irish soldiers are dying at the front that their country may prosper. The nobility of sacrifice should shame all the wreckers of Ireland's future. The guilt of the horrible bloodshed at Dublin will be on the misguided leaders of the outbreak."
