

central station of our Mission, that about eighty young people will, for years and perhaps generations to come, be gathered here to receive their intellectual, moral and religious education, that it is the first French Protestant church which is in a great measure built by the congregation itself, and that the church proper will ere long have become self-supporting. A little help now, and by and by, we will walk alone.

REPORT OF MR. ROUX, PRINCIPAL OF THE FELLER INSTITUTE, GRANDE LIGNE.

This year has been a peculiar one in several respects. First by the much larger number of applicants for admission than in former years, especially of Roman Catholics, of which thirty-nine asked for admission. The income from the pupils' fees is also much in advance of former years, as the financial report will show. There were so many applications for younger, untrained uneducated pupils that, if we were able to provide it, a new department for such would meet a great want. Whilst we note the desirability of such department for younger pupils who have everything to learn, we often desire a higher one than we have, and situated in Montreal, as a means of preparing the future laborers. But the foundation for such is the much needed Endowment Fund we have often suggested.

A smaller matter here at Grande Ligne, but very desirable item, is a Gymnasium, to have our boys and girls out of the house for a few hours in bad weather, when they cannot go to play out doors.

Now, as to the general aspect of the work, others will speak about it. It seems to me, however, that the country is ripening for a Reformation on a large scale, and in which we shall have our share.
