

ANOTHER NEW IDEA
TO PREVENT THEFT

An Electrical Device Made So That It Would Tax the Ingenuity of the Most Practiced Thief.

Inventions designed to prevent automobile thefts are being perfected so they will also facilitate detection of motor car thieves.

Until a short time ago inventors had been devoting their genius to devising mechanisms intended merely to prevent theft of motor cars. But the "art" of automobile stealing has progressed to such an extent that preventive mechanisms only delayed the thief in his operations.

The result has been that a new class of automobile locks is being produced, a, failing to prevent theft, will cause detection almost instantly.

One of these is an ingenious contrivance being perfected by Deputy Police Commissioner Joseph A. Fauriol, of New York and Lieut. James J. Sledge of the New York Police Training School. It is called a Fauriol-Scope, and is welded on he left front fender.

First models of this invention, which now going through a process of severe tests and corrections, consist of an electric mechanism showing a circular disc when the car is driven by its right-hand wheel, and a diamond-shaped disc when it is left unattended. The diamond disc is red, and carries the inscription: "Tell policeman if this car moves carrying his diamond disc."

The diamond disc is locked into the mechanism so that it cannot be taken off without causing an automobile alarm.

While this disc is attached, the motor car is shut off, and cannot be started if the disc is unlocked and the circumscribed.

Should a thief manage to hammer off whole mechanism, which he would quite difficult, he would leave tell-holes in the mud-guard, and would the motor power shut off. At the time he would incur the danger of missing the automobile alarm.

Another kind of invention which automobile insurance experts say helps detection of a stolen machine is one which locks the steering mechanism so that the steering wheel cannot be turned. It is attached to the steering post just below the wheel. It consists of a collar arrangement with teeth which fit into holes so that a slight turn of the steering wheel will engage the teeth and make the wheel immovable.

The only way a car with such mechanism attached can be stolen is by use of a wrecking machine. The front wheels would have to be lifted off the ground, so that the car could be towed off. Sighting a wrecking car moving an apparently damaged automobile would look suspicious to a policeman. Besides, considerable time would be lost in the operation of lifting the car and moving.

THE PURPOSE OF "HAMLET"

James Westfall Thompson in the North American Review.

Shakespeare in "Hamlet" meant to insight against some of the worst abuses of his time; court intrigue and administrative corruption, chicanery and diplomacy, espionage and eavesdropping in high official circles, grave miscarriage in the administration of justice, and above all the appalling prevalence of assassination in Tudor England.

"Hamlet" is Shakespeare's protest against the condition of Elizabethan England. It was not Denmark but England that was rotten. Not merely Hamlet, but Shakespeare felt that "the time is out of joint." It was literally true, if the secrets of the murders of Shakespeare's own time could have been revealed, that more things in heaven and earth would come to light than men's philosophy dreamed.

It seems strange, so far as I know Shakespearean literature that no critic has perceived the remarkable applicability of the tragedy of Amy Robsart to "Hamlet." The language of the play just startlingly fits in with the case of Amy Robsart, the suspicion resting upon Leicester of having compassed her murder, and the suspected liaison between Leicester and Elizabeth.

As long as Elizabeth lived even guarded criticism was dangerous. It required a change of dynasty to release even veiled speech. As for flat, open discussion of the mystery of Amy Robsart or any other murder case of note, it was still quite impossible. Hence Shakespeare's resort to a drama in which under canonized guile Londoners might perceive the real spirit and condition of the age.
"Hamlet" is the most brilliant assortment of double-edged language, covert criticism, cutting allusion to contemporary men, women and events, burning scorn, withering irony, to be found in any literature. If read aright, the play dances and astounds the reader by its keenness, its satire, the stinging lash of its language, its mockery or condemnation of some of the very greatest personages in Elizabethan England.

UP TO OURSELVES.

old sailor, "coasts are pretty much the

Which is just what those of us who are wise say about life. The chief difference between people is not that they have different experiences, but that they look at those experiences differently.

Some men take with laughs of joy what other men take with tears. Some men are strengthened by the same kind of adversity that kills others.

We create the world in which we live it is so easy, why should we not create
