SELF-SACRIFICE—A FABLE

(Haverhill Gazette.)
Once there was a man who lived for his family.

He was interested in all they did and proud of their successes. He stayed home at night and liked to spend his evenings with them.

He spent very little money on himself, and worked hard every day to give them all that heart could desire.

But still he felt that they did not have enough, and he began to speculate to make money for them faster.

That led to failure and a drop in the world. And then he worked the harder to make up for the bad judgment by which he had robbed them.

But the strain was too great and gradually he began to feel that he was not wanted by them and he felt a little hurt and began to keep out of the circle.

And then he felt that he wasn't wanted in it and he began to resent their happy life with each other, and when he saw them talking quietly together he felt so much left out that it looked to him like plotting—they were all conspiring against him—and he began to threaten.

And that helped to kill their love. And so things kept getting worse until family life was at an end, and the people in all the world that he cared the most about despised them, and he knew it. And there is no worse agony than that.

If he hadn't tried so hard to do it all himself they would have all been happy still. Self-sacrifice is as bad as selfishness when it becomes a fixed idea.

REAL POLITENESS

(New York Independent.)
A correspondent of the New York Sun sent in the following translation of a Chinese rejection slip, used in returning would-be contributions: "We have read thy manuscript with infinite delight. Never before have we revelled in such a masterpiece. If we printed it the authorities would ordain us to take it for a model, and henceforth never print anything inferior to it. As it would be impossible to find its equal within ten thousand years, we are compelled, though shaken with sorrow, to return your divine manuscript, and for doing so we beg one thousand pardons."

BEER AND WINE HUMBUG.

(Toronto Globe.)
"Wet Montreal is a Mecca for dry Americans," says an expressive headline in the Chicago Tribune of Monday. The Montreal despatch on which it is based says that while the sale of hard liquor in Quebec is prohibited by law, whiskey can be bought openly over the bar. To quote:

"The writer visited fifteen saloons here in only one week. In most of them whiskey was consumed by nearly all patrons. The price per drink is from 25 to 35 cents.

He also obtained whiskey in single drink quantities in a saloon camouflaged as a lunch room. No beer was sold here, the proprietor having no license of any kind. "Why bother with beer and wine?" he said.

"Thousands of American citizens now are crowding Montreal, 'holding parties' for New York, Boston and other northern United States cities are crowded daily. Hotels here are jammed. Reservations must be obtained far in advance."

The Tribune's correspondent says the situation bears out the claim of United States Federal Prohibition Director John Kramer, who said: "If the sale of beer and light wine is permitted in the United States through a modification of the prohibition laws, the people of Quebec would be employed to vote for the licensed sale of beer and wine, but they now know that such a compromise cannot purge the liquor traffic of its inherent lawlessness. It is the old story of the camel getting its nose under the tent."

"In These Wild Times,"
If your check for dinner amounts to more than the price on the bill of fare would lead you to expect, keep your head shut and don't show your ignorance. It simply means that the prices have been raised between the time you ordered and the moment your check was made out.

Don't Let The Frost Catch You
Repairs to your buildings can be made more cheaply now than when the frost comes.
