

Lillian Russell Tells Women How

LILLIAN RUSSELL, AS SHE LOOKS TODAY.

To be 50 years old—"Who's Who in America," says she was born in Clinton, Ia., in 1860—and still acclaimed America's most beautiful woman, is the enviable lot of Lillian Russell, comedy queen.

For 30 years, since when a girl Tony Pastor discovered her ability as an entertainer and started her on her stage career, Lillian Russell's beauty has been famous. She has been the America's most beautiful woman, in the enviable lot of Lillian Russell, comedy queen.

ROOSEVELT IN PARIS

Writer in Punch, Tells Graphic Story of Strenuous One's Visit to French Capital—Tribute to Personality.

(From Punch.) Mr. Roosevelt's tour as it goes on, fully justifies my description of it as a unique tribute to a personality which has deeply impressed the whole world, vegetable and animal, as well as human.

"The energies of the actor, if they are continuously devoted to the realistic portrayal of mean, ignoble or undesirable characteristics, cannot but react disadvantageously on his moral fibre. Contrariwise, if the actor or actress, exclusively devotes his or her best talents to the impersonation of such characters as are only noted for their integrity, honesty and piety, it is more than probable that in the long run his or her soul will be braced and toned up to a higher level of moral achievement."

The students were hypnotized by Mr. Roosevelt's vehemence, and by his sledgehammer sincerity. Strong women wept like men; several fascinating sourestees were reduced to hysterics; and a young French nobleman, renowned for his command of English slang, observed in my hearing, "Golly! What a corker!" Mr. Roosevelt wound up a speech which lasted for thirty-five minutes, and contained sixty thousand words, by a poignant and soul-shaking appeal to the students to be true to the ideals of the ancient Romans. "Rome," he said, "was not built in a day, and the Latin Quarter cannot be adequately described in a quarter of an hour."

As the third act of Iron-Frou was now approaching its conclusion Mr. Roosevelt reluctantly returned to his box.

Friday morning—I have just returned from witnessing one of the most beautiful and touching sights that have ever fallen to the lot of a modern journalist. I refer to the visit paid this morning by Mr. Roosevelt and his son to the Jardin des Plantes. Never since the memorable preaching of St. Francis to the birds has a great man exhibited such gracious consideration to the brute creation. In such circumstances some men would have gone armed to the teeth, but Mr. Roosevelt did not take with him even a revolver. The note of perfect friendliness towards the inmates was set.

HOUSE PASSES ARBOR DAY BILL AND PRESENTS Hints for Renewing Interest in the Institution Founded in Inspiration Leading to Forest Reform—Feared that Usefulness Under Present System May Have Passed.

Like Thanksgiving, Arbor Day was first established as a national institution in the United States. When Hon. J. Sterling Morton prevailed upon the Nebraska Board of Agriculture, way back in 1872, to proclaim the first Arbor Day and to urge the prairie farmers of his state to plant trees, he showed his confidence in the intelligence of the American public. The influence of that simple effort has been felt throughout the country, and has extended to other countries. Today forty-four states have laws on the books which require the planting of trees on the public domain, and it has been adopted also in Canada, Italy, Sweden, Spain, France, Italy, South Africa, Australia and New Zealand.

Living in the comparatively treeless portion of the West Mr. Morton had come to realize the immense value that a forest station would be to his brother farmers in that region. As a direct result of that resolution of the Nebraska Board of Agriculture the first Arbor Day was proclaimed in that state that same year. Thousands, it is safe to say, came to naught owing to the general ignorance as to what and how to plant. But a seed was sown by Mr. Morton's act larger than all the trees, for it speedily germinated and grew lustily, until the present day. The United States applies coming to the fore as one of the most advanced nations in forest science.

Born in a practical mind, and with a definite object in view, the thought of Arbor Day was given to the country in such a form that it drew from American fishermen the sentiment of the people. Improvement associations welcomed this official recognition of the value of trees as a profitable investment. School authorities everywhere came at length to observe the occasion with appropriate literary exercises, and often with planting of class and other memorial trees upon the school grounds. Even the most sentimental among us have learned to state for directly to the economic ends aimed at by the founder. A body of healthy public sentiment has developed, more powerful than any law, which demands that a tree be on the highway or in the forest, be accorded the care and protection which is the due of so important a factor in the material prosperity of humans.

It is a question today, however, whether Arbor Day has not somewhat outlived its usefulness, in many sections, at least. It has nobly served the purpose of arousing public interest in the general subject of forestry and arboriculture, so that at present we may find many efficient official agencies at work carrying vigorous and practical measures in this line. In many sections, however, the theories which have been preached by the enthusiasts every Arbor Day for these past forty years, are not only maintained, but operate the great national forest, amounting to nearly two hundred million acres, but it is for the benefit of the individual forest owner to make intelligent plans for the management of their timber, and yet others are added by the same means to develop a factor in the lands useless for other purposes. This work is being seconded by a number of the States, Massachusetts among the foremost, by the Federal Government, and the creation of State-owned forests.

Also, the highway shade trees have in every town an officer appointed to watch over their welfare, and State, and Capt. Archibald W. Butt, first placed one of the White House automobiles at the Prince's disposal. Four troops of cavalry from Fort Myer escorted the official party to the Hotel Willard, where the Prince will stay during his three-day visit to this city.

Accompanying the Prince are Lord Ching Mai, a son of Li Hung Chang, and Gen. Hsueh Sheng, Chinese minister in chief of the Chinese army. Lord Li speaks English fluently and is the interpreter of the party.

At 11 o'clock Secretary of State Knox called on the Prince at his apartments. One hour later the Prince returned the visit at the State Department. Secretary Knox and the Prince spent some time chatting. Mr. Knox welcomed him to this country in behalf of the government and people of the United States.

The Prince next called on Secretary of War Dickinson, who introduced him to many of the general officers of the army who are on duty in the War Department. Mr. Dickinson also conducted the Prince through the corridors of the Department to show him objects of interest in the department's museum, such as figures depicting the development of the American uniform, pack and wagon trains.

The purpose of the Prince's mission to the United States is to study the military system for use in the proposed reorganization of the Chinese army. The Prince in his own country holds a post corresponding to Secretary of War and has undertaken the task of creating a standing army of 500,000 soldiers consisting of thirty-six divisions of 10,000 men each. Later he will visit the Naval Academy at Annapolis and the Military Academy at West Point. He will leave Washington Saturday night for Buffalo.

TSAI TO DOES IN WASHINGTON Chinese Prince Who Faces Task of Creating Army of 360,000 Men, Making Observations in United States.

Washington, April 30.—Prince T'ai, a member of the royal family and uncle of the young Emperor of China, arrived in Washington yesterday and began the round of entertainment and social affairs that has been arranged in his honor. After paying formal calls on Secretary of State Knox and Secretary of War Dickinson, the Prince was received by President Taft in the Blue Room at the White House this afternoon.

He was introduced to Mr. Taft by Chang Ying Tang, the Chinese minister here. Through an interpreter the Prince said that he came to the United States first on his tour of the world because of the long standing friendship between the United States and China.

In reply, Mr. Taft requested the Prince upon his return to Peking to carry personally to the Prince Regent of China for his friendly attitude toward the United States during the railroad loan negotiations. The fact that the Chinese government was willing to allow the United States to participate in the loan, Mr. Taft said, had given this government a voice in Oriental affairs.

Through an interpreter the Prince and the members of his party attended a special cavalry drill at Fort Myer, Virginia. Also President Taft gave a dinner in honor of the distinguished visitor. About forty guests were present including Secretary Knox, Speaker Cannon, Secretary Dickinson, Secretary Meyer and prominent members of the House and Senate.

The Prince and his party were met at the United States on their arrival early in the morning by Chandler Hale, Third Assistant Secretary of State, and a number of other officials.

Major Currie suggested that the heavy expenses to which officers are put. The minister agreed that the allowance to officers in training is absurdly low. Major Currie drew attention to the imposition of duties on officers in forms. The minister held out no hope of a remission of duty but said that an allowance for uniforms might be granted.

In the grant for armories Major Currie suggested that when public buildings are erected in small towns to provide quarters for the local militia company the minister approved. Major Currie criticized the size and cost of the headquarters staff. The minister replied that the Canadian headquarters staff is smaller and less expensive than that of Switzerland, which is regarded as the model militia force.

The house rose at midnight having passed in an hour and half militia estimates of rather over seven millions.
