ADDPUTTING AND DRIVING TO GOLF'S TITLE PROGRAMME

Interesting Experiments Are to be Carried Out on the British Links During Coming Season -- Handsome Prizes Being Offered.

The average British golfer is accustomed to look upon many kinds of American tourneys as faddish, writes John G. Anderson, in the New York Herald. When bogey events were first introduced they were likewise ridiculed until their worth became apparent, and when one-club events, sweatst, and the like took their place upon the programme ridicule ceased to occur. But when tournaments with a couple of bores and putty balls were introduced pity was expressed.

But there have been times when we too, have had a chance to smile. Fourteen years ago one tournament was planned to take in all the golfers of Great Britain. It was to be a medal and later match play with every amateur golfer in the United Kingdom eligible. There was no entrance fee attached, there was a chance for a couple of hundred thousand golfers at least to enter and the prizes were world beaters. First prize was a house and a lot worth £1,000 with second prize a high powered automobile and other diminishing prizes in like ratio.
