J. D. O'Connell's Interest in the Children Shown in Practical Way—Generosity of Little Ones Also Apparent. To the Editor of The Telegraph: Sir—Perhaps hardly enough prominence has been given in the public press to the very hearty response of the orphans at Mr. J. D. O'Connell's picnic on Monday at Rockwood Park, to his suggestion that of the five and twenty-cent pieces which he had unconditionally given to each child guest those who were so disposed could contribute a sum not exceeding five cents each to the Belgian relief fund.

Our Philanthropic Men in Business. A R. Gould says he gave J. H. Crockett that celebrated $1,000 of Valley railway money just because Crockett wanted it. And now Mr. Crockett intimates that a firm of railway contractors has given him $2,000 just for love, or merely in recognition of the fact that he promised to put in a good word for them when they were trying to get paid for their work.

DEFEAT OF GOVERNMENT MUST FOLLOW

Men Who Are Standing Behind J. K. Flemming Doom to Defeat, Says Chatham World—"Our Philanthropic Men of Business," a Sarcastic Heading. The Chatham World, of which J. K. Stewart is editor and proprietor, has the following: Why It Became Corrupt. Just as water becomes stagnant and when it remains quiet in one place it becomes fouled by current or any other disturbing force, so the government that finds itself in power, with no opposition to mar its tranquillity and keep it on the alert, becomes corrupt.
