REMINDER OF THE PENAL DAYS.

The Bishop of Waterford, Ireland, in opening a bazaar, not long since, to assist in clearing off the debt on the Cathedral, made a very interesting speech. The site upon which the Cathedral stood (he said) was hallowed by most sacred traditions. They had to go far back into modern history, at all events, to find the time when a Catholic Cathedral, and possibly a Catholic Church, did not stand there.

The Catholics of Waterford were driven out by the party of Cromwell in 1650 and 1651, without a hope of being able to return. But they did return, for all that, and in a few years afterwards, in the time of Charles II., there were four Catholic churches, as they were then called, Catholic chapels, in the city, and one of those stood on the site of the present cathedral.

During the next fifty years or so the tide of bigotry began to rise higher and higher, unfortunately, with this result, among others, that the Catholics, in deference, as they publicly proclaimed it, to the views of non-Catholics, closed up three out of these four chapels, and finally, towards the end of the century, one of them—the fourth—namely, the predecessor of the present building—got into a ruinous state of decay. It was, unfortunately, at a time when penal legislation was beginning to be in fullest swing in the country. Nevertheless the Catholics availing themselves of the quietness of the spot as they said, set to work about 1693 and put up the one Catholic chapel that was then available for the Catholics of Waterford; but they had scarcely done so when a loud outcery was raised against them, and the Corporation of the day was petitioned to prosecute those who had the audacity to raise such a building in the City of Waterford. The counter-petition presented by the Catholics on that occasion is reading of the most melancholy kind. The Bishop said that he doubted if there was in the whole history of penal legislation any other document comparable to that which was forwarded by the Catholics. They recited the history of the building of their little chapel, as they called it. They said it was in a remote corner hidden away from the view of the Lord Bishop and the Protestant clergy and the Mayor and Corporation when they walked out. They went on to tell how they had four chapels and had closed up three of them in deference to Protestant opinion; they recited that they had then no other place of worship, and they added that every care would be taken so that no cause of offence could possibly arise; that two men would be posted at the gate to keep out the inhabitants of the suburbs, and furthermore, that care would be taken that all the services in the church would be ended and the gates locked before the Protestant services in the town began on the Sabbath Day. They appear to have succeeded in staving off hostility for there was no further record that they were molested; and this old church stood until 1773. In that year, however, they had a petition of a different kind—a communication of a totally different kind on the part of their non-Catholic fellow-citizens. The Corporation of 1793 was approached in order that the Catholics might get some additional ground, then public property, for the erection of a new building partly on the site of the old. A committee was appointed, and gladly and generously the Protestant Corporation of the day gave the ground upon which the present cathedral stands, from what was then called Bailey's Lane to Mr. Charles Clarke's house, for a period of 999 years, at the annual rental of two shillings and six pence.

Like Another O'Connell.

All remember O'Connell's answer when he was upbraided for reciting his beads in the corridor of the English House of Commons, while his colleagues were in hot debate in the interests of their faith and of their native land.

"I am helping them more than you think."

M. de Castelnau, French senator, whose death has just been chronicled, was as ardent a lover of the beads as the great Emancipator. He was a Catholic who believed in frequent Communion; every Sunday, and on all feast days saw him at the altar. The secret of his power was fervent prayer, and not content with the beads, he often recited the fifteen decades of the rosary the little office of the Blessed Virgin Mary, and, besides he went daily for advice to his Friend of the tabernacle. His beads brought him victory at the polls. "What do you want us to do with a deputy who says his beads every day," said one, but these beads did not prevent him from being listened to with attention every time he spoke in the Chamber, where he often treated with rare ability questions of law, finance and agriculture.

A Wonderful Book.

A book prepared by Catholic hands is beyond doubt the most beautiful volume among the 700,000 in the Congressional Library at Washington. It is a Bible which was transcribed by a monk in the sixteenth century. It could not be matched to-day in the best printing office in the world.

The parchment is in perfect preservation. Every one of its 1000 pages is a study. The general lettering is in German text, each letter perfect, and every one of them in coal black ink, without a scratch or blot from lid to lid. At the beginning of each chapter the first letter is very large, usually two or three inches long, and is brightly illuminated in blue or red ink. Within each cious volume is kept under a glass case which is sometimes lifted to show that all the pages are as perfect as the two which lie open.

IT PAYS TO BALE YOUR HAY WITH AN I.H.C. HAY PRESS

HAY should be baled no matter whether it is to be fed or marketed. Careful tests that have been made prove the fact that baled hay well kept is worth from 25 to 50 per cent more for feeding purposes than hay that is exposed to the weather in stacks and ricks. When it becomes a question of saving 25 to 50 per cent of your hay crop it is worth while for you to stop and consider, is it not? Baled hay is more valuable because there is no waste—no dust—it has more feed value. It is kept in better condition for feeding purposes and is more convenient to handle.

An I. H. C. Pull-Power Hay Press

will enable you to save the 25 to 50 per cent of your hay crop that is going to waste. It will enable you to make a good profit out of your own labor by baling your hay when you have the time.

I. H. C. hay presses are simple, strong and very powerful. They are made on the pull-power principle, that is, the pressure is applied to the hay by a pull instead of a push. They are so designed that they give greater pressure with the same amount of power than any other press of equal size. The presses are the full-circle type, which avoids frequent stopping, turning or backing of the horses.

The I. H. C. one-horse press is made with 14 x 18-inch bale chamber, and the two-horse press is made with three sizes of bale chamber—14 x 18, 16 x 18 and 17 x 22 inches. Call on our nearest local agent and ask him to demonstrate the I H C hay presses to you, or, if you prefer, write nearest branch house for catalogue and full particulars.

Rev. Father Caire Dead.

The death occurred, on the 16th at St. Joseph's Hospital, Guelph, of Rev. Father Eugene Caire, in his sixtieth year, after a lingering illness which made him a patient at the institution for some months. Born and ordained in France, Father Caire came to Canada twenty-seven years ago and joined the Hamilton diocese, being connected with St. Mary's Cathedral in Hamilton. He was there Secretary to the then Bishop and later to the official Bishop Dowling. About twenty years ago he joined the Society of Jesus and went to Montreal, where, with his classical education, he became a professor at St. Mary's College. In later years he became connected with the parish at Sault Ste. Marie, Michigan, and later at Massey, Algoma, where he was parish priest. Here he took ill and eight months ago was sent to Guelph in the hope of effecting a cure, but six months ago he took a serious turn and had since slowly neared the end. Although a Frenchman, Father Caire had an excellent command of English and was known as a brilliant speaker and scholar.

A Mother's Reverie.

Of what is my wee one thinking, as so peacefully he sleeps
While watch and ward above his bed, his guardian ange keeps.
Do visions of fair angels flit before his baby eyes,
Is he walking with the white-gowned saints in the fields of paradise,
Is he listening to the music grand, through the courts of heaven pealing,
That o'er his face as there he sleeps, such a wondrous light is stealing.

For oh, his smile's so strangely sweet, oftimes it seems to me,
God must be smiling down on him, and the reflection, 'tis, I see.
So I pray God, so merciful, will mercy show to me,
For love of that dear Mother who held Him on her knee,
And leave my babe, so well-beloved, for a little while to cheer
My mother-heart, as o'er life's path I tread from year to year.

And I wonder if in years to come, my thoughts will backward turn,
And for the babe of long ago, my weary heart will yearn,
And then sometimes, there comes a thought, that much disquiet brings,
I wonder, if some day I'll wish, the sound of angels' wings
Had drowned my prayer, before it reached the shining throne of God,
And while I wept a plea unheard, my babe lay 'neath the sod.

If then I'll wish that ere his soul with the stains of sin was dyed,
As he smiled into an angel's face, while sleeping, he had died
