Tt is rumored in Dublin that Lord Chief Justice May is about to retire, to be succeeded by Sir Michael Morris, Bart. In this case the Attorney General would succeed to the vacancy on the Bench, but in future there shall be only one Chief Justice in Ireland, as it is already the case in England.

On September 14th, four milch cows, the property of Mrs. Delaney, the Mills, Kilmoganny, were seized by the landlord, Major Marsh, for rent, and impounded in Kilkenny. Nine milch cows belonging to Mr. James Awlward, Lukeswell, were seized at the suit of the landlord, Mr. J. as the fair green at the monthly fairs.

Wexford.

On September 15 an eviction took place at Coolcots, on the estate of Lord Donoughmore. The victim, Mrs. Hannah Byrne, had about eight acres—the rent of which varied, part being held under an old lease. Being unable to meet the exorbitant demand of the landlord, a decree was obtained against her in June last, which was carried into effect, and she was disposessed of about three acres, held at £4 an acre, a figure much higher than that paid for the surrounding land. Bailiff Carthy and Joe Graham, the rent warner and general estate balliff, formally took possession. There was no demonstration of feeling, the arrival of the bailiffs being unexpected and unknown at the time. Mr. On September 15 an eviction took place unexpected and unknown at the time. Mr. Larry Kirwan, victualler and milk vendor, Wexford, had his cattle on the evicted farm at present and they are herded there by Red James Murphy, as emergencyman. Westmeath.

On Sept 13, the Sub Sheriff of Weston Sept 13, the Sub Sheriff of Westmeath, accompanied by a large force of Constabulary, attended at Ballinlassy, near Moate, the estate of Mr. F. W. Russell, of Lissanads, for the purpose of evicting several tenants, whose rents were largely in arrears. A large crowd of sympathizers assembled, but the whole proceedings terminated without any hostile demonstration.

At a National Lesgue demonstration at Midleton, to protect signise the action of Lord Midleton in prohibiting monthly fairs, resolutions were passed condemning the Government to accept Mr. Parnell's bill, as owing to the bad harvest it would be impossible to pay an unjust rent, especially in face of the present low prices. The meeting was attended by several thousand persons from Cork, Youghal, Queenstown, &c. On the next aday, the usual monthly fairs was held, and proved an entire success, notwithstanding that Mr. Penrose Fitzgerald—Lord Midleton's agent—and another estate of interest and silical went about "intimidating" buyers and sellors agent—and another estate of locality. Lord Howth has, through his agent, informed the Local Government Board that he apprehends much distress among the fishing population of Howth during the coming Winter. He says that the insufficiency of house accommodation there has arisen "from the prevalence of early and improvident marriages among the fishing class without any corresponding development of the fishing industry."

The inability of many of the fishermen to pay rent is, he fears, beyond doubt. He has allocated £50 to be expended during the Winter in relief of the fishermen.

Eleven ejectment processes have been served on the tenants of Sir Ralph Cusack, in the townland of Raleagh, parish of Kildallen. The land is, for the most part, of the poorest description, and the tenants are utterly unable to pay the sums that are sgainst them. The case is more remarkable from the fact that a short time before the service of the ejectment, the bailiff on the property called on the tenants to inform them that the landlord was prepared to sell them their holdings. The tenants replied that they were willing to buy, and this reply they sent through the hands of the agent, Mr. John Faris, of Corr. The batch of ejectments referred to above was the only allower they got.

On September 12th, in the presence of an immense congregation, the new church at Corrigart was solemnly dedicated by the Most Rev. Dr. Logue, Blahep of Raphoe, the Bishop of Galway, the Most Rev. Dr. Carr, was the preacher, and delivered a discourse of singular beauty and impressiveness. The church is perhaps the finest in the diocese, and has been erected at very great expense. The collection realized a large sum.

Page, the so-called bailiff, who resigned his position at Woodford rather than carry out the evictions, was not a bailiff, but an under agent on the property, as his father was during his lifetime, and in throwing up the agency he threw up £100 a year. It was a big sacrifice to make, and he deserves the thanks of every sincere Nationalist for doing so. The person that has taken it is a son to the Whelan who went against priests and people at the went against priests and people at the famous Galway election, and voted for

The police are again flocking to Woodford it is said to reap and save (or rather to protect Emergency men while doing so) the crops of the evicted tenants, and by all accounts it won't be hard work for them to do so, as the thousands who thronged there at the time of the eyiction trampled them to the face of the earth. After the people vacating Broder's house, the whole multitude present turned away quietly and never left a stone upon another of three miles of stone walls from quietly and never left a stone upon another of three miles of stone walls from that to "Saunders' fort" but they placed on the public road, and although here were over two hundred police at work it took them six and a half hours to go from one place to another. There were about three acres of turnips on the lands around "Saunders' fort" when the work of the exterminator commenced, besides several acres of corn and potatoes; but by the time the foul work was finished there was no sign of vegetables on the whole farm; it was trampled mercilessly under thousands of feet, and it now has as much the appearance of desolation as if an invading sands of feet, and it now has as must the appearance of desolation as if an invading army had passed over it. Keeping the Woodford prisioners in jail after such enormous amounts of bail had been offered enormous amounts of bail had been offered for their appearance will not make the work of Government much easier for the authorities. Experience proves that persecution does not tend to soften the tempers of the friends of the persecuted, and we all know that to make an Irishman a really deadly enemy of English rule in Ireland you have only to give him a term on the "plank bed" and you can count on him for ever after.

One was himself, the other he knew is not. Next day in a church he met his companion of the vision. It was St. Francis. There began between the two great saints that wonderful friendship, which has been perpetuated down the ages between their children. Side by side you will find the brown robe of St. Francis and it the white robe of St. Dominic, in the debate of universities, in the centres of civilization, on the plains of Eastern Asia, beneath the burning sun of Africa, along the rivers and on the pampas of South America, everywhere where the Church extends her sway. Side by side they have lived and labored, taught and preached, side by side they have crimsoned their robes in martyrs' blood, united in that fraternal embrace with which Dominic and Francis beneath the Roman Basilica sealed for time and eternity their mutual love Francis beneath the Roman Basilica sealed for time and eternity their mutual love and work. Here you behold them beneath these northwestern skies, within sound of water vocal with the names of St. Anthony and Hennepin, sons of St. Francis, within this sanctuary, celebrating and perpetuating together the memory of their founders and singing in concert "the Seraphic Francis and the Apostolic Dominic here taught us thy law. O Lord."

ARRIST AT MASS

DAILY SECULD WE LEND OUR PRESENCE Was the sacrifice of Calvary to be again enacted physically in our day, as it was eighteen centuries ago, what tremendous excitement, what extraordinary uproar, would it not produce in Christian ranks. The Christian belief that a God was being would it not produce in Christian ranks. The Christian belief that a God was being crucified, that heaven was about to be again opened and that access to the presence of God's infinite majesty was to be obtained through Christ's death, would arouse the world's dormant sloth and cause indifferent Christians to leap through joy, in hopes of salvation. God, in His inecrutable judgment, declared that Christ would die only once on Calvary's cross, but he provided for a daily offering of that same sacrifice to continue from the "rising till the setting of the sun" by the ministerial agency of his priesthood. With the eyes of faith, enlightened by divine inspiration, every Catholic can be daily present at the self same sacrifice, in which the same divine victim continues to offer himself in an unbloody manner by the hands of the priest on our altars.

Every mass offered is Calvary's sacrifice repeated, and every mass is as acceptable to God the Father, as that one bloody sacrifice on Calvary's hill, which opened heaven to the decendants of sinful Adam. The infinite love that God displayed for mankind, in the death of His divine son, is rendered is as immensurable in its affects.

mankind, in the death of His divine son, is rendered in every mass and every mass offered is as immeasurable in its effects as the one great sacrifice of Calvary. Catholics, knowing and believing all this, display a wonderful disinterestedness in this most powerful means of obtaining God's grace in not striving to assist at, and partake of, the benefits of as many masses as possible. The angels assist at maes, are rejoiced at this wonderful act of God's providence, in aiding humanity to ascend the celestial steep. How deaf then, are we not all to God's call, when the church bells daily ring and announce to us the glad tidings that announce to us the glad tidings that Christ through the ainistry of His priest, is about to be offered in the mass, to pro-plate God for our transgressions, that Christ is to be immolated on the sacrificial altar, and bring down innumerable bleesings on the sinful world, in not mak-ing efforts to be present at mass, and reap for ourselves a portion of the rich harvest and fill our souls at the banquet of the

Every mass bell is a call from heaven to come to the Master's banquet and when the business man and the rich man are too much engaged in worldly affairs to accept the invitation, the poor are God's only guests, and hence in our large cities and towns throughout the countrythey are seen wending their way every morning to God's Church to witness the immolation of God and enrich their souls in the blood of the Lamb. It would be well for Catholic men in all our towns to make a little sacrifice every morning, to enable them to sacrifice every morning, to enable them to attend mass and thus prepare their souls for the business of the day. Their busi-ness will not suffer by their absence in church; on the contrary, God will fructify the labors of their hands, that are raised daily in presence of the altar of God.—Iowa Messenger.

SINTEENTH SUNDAY AFTER PENTECOST "When thou art invited to a wedding go sit down in the lowest place, that when he who invited thee cometh, he may say: Friend, go up higher."—Words from this Sunday's Gospel.

Of the sins which men commit, some Of the sins which men commit, some excite horror and detestation, others shame and contempt, others even pity and compassion. There is one sin, however, which, on account of its extreme foolishness, moves men to laughter and mirth, and that is the sin of vain glory. The sin of vain glory, I say, not the sin of pride; for, although people often confuse the one with the other, yet they are in reality as far asunder as the poles. Pride consists in despising others and all they say, do and think: nay even, when carried to its full extent, Almighty God Himself. The proud man makes so little account of others that he does not care what they think of him. He is entirely taken up others that he does not care what they think of him. He is entirely taken up with his own superior excellence and abilities. But for the vain glorious man the good opinion of others is the very breath of life, in and for which they live and move and have their being. I am inclined to think that there are not very many really proud people among us, but of the vain-glorious men and women the number is infinite.

For correlar for a moment the way in

For, consider for a moment the way in | had be For, consider for a moment the way in which people are acting every day. How many women there are who spend all the money they can spare, and more than they can well spare, in buying dresses and bonnets and fine ribbons, and give up all their leisure moments either to decking themselves out in their fineries or to displaying them to the rest of the world. And with what result? Well this is not the place for me to repeat the remarks And with what result? Well this is not the place for me to repeat the remarks which all these efforts call forth from other women; and if sometimes the desired effect is produced upon persons of the other sex, is it not a humiliating thought that success should be due not to any personal excellence, but to the clothes that are worn?

Again, how many men there are of whom it is the supreme delight and the topmost object of ambition to have their names appear in the papers. Should they realize their desire how proud they are, and how carefully they keep their copy. I wonder they do not have it framed and hung up in their rooms. But it passes comprehension how any man of sense can hung up in their rooms. But it passes comprehension how any man of sense can take pleasure in seeing his name in such papers as most of ours are nowadays, filled, as their columns are, with accounts of adulteries, elopements, suicides and every kind of disgraceful action. And even if the papers were more decent than they are, among their thousand and one contents how much attention would your doings receive, even if duly chronicled, and how long would they be remembered?

These are but specimens of the foolishness of the way in which people are acting every day, and ordinary intelligence is sufficient to show the folly and emptiness of it all. I wish to point out, however, one consequence of this pursuit of worldly honors which is not sufficiently adverted to, and it is this—that by seeking glory which is worthless we run the risk of losing that which is of infinite and everlasting value. For it is not wrong to seek glory and honor. Our Lord Himself revered that the might be clarified. of losing that which is of infinite and everlasting value. For it is not wrong to teek glory and honor. Our Lord Himlest pelf prayed that He might be glorified. We have an inborn and an ineradicable desire of honor and glory, and to cherish and cultivate this desire is not only right, but a duty. What is wrong is the seeking it in the wrong way we shall fall short of that which is set before us as the reward of our actions. And what is that?

Listen to what St. Paul eays: "We all beholding the glory of the Lord with open face, are transformed into the same image from glory to cluve; as hy the Solution of the same image from glory to cluve; as hy the Solution of the same image.

from glory to glory, as by the Spirit of the Lord." It is the attainment of this glory which our foolishness endangers.

How to Avoid Calumny.

"If any one speaks ill of thee," said Epictetus, "consider whether he hath truth on his side, and if so, reform thyself, that his censures may not affect thee." When Anaxamander was told that the very boys laughed at his singing, "Ay," said he, "then I must learn to sing better." Plato being told that he had many enemies who epoke ill of him, said: "It is no matter; I will live so that no one will believe them." Hearing at another time that a very intimate friend of his had spoken detractively of him, he said: "I am sure he would not do it if he had not some reason for it." This is the surest, as well mes reason for it." This is the surest, as well as the noblest way of drawing the sting out of a reproach, and the true method of preparing a man for that great and only relief sgainst the pains of calumny— a good conscience.
